Senate G.O.P. Asked to Aid Roosevelt On Neutrality

McNary Takes Poll, To Be Reported to President, After White House Parley

Tientsin Talks Delayed

ANGLO-JAPANESE conversations over Tientsin were temporarily postponed but Prime Minister Chamberlain indicated Tokyo was willing to negotiate the dispute as "local," despite previous contrary intimations from Japanese. Page 4.

SOVIET-JAPANESE border warfare was said by Japanese to be entering a 48-hour period of crisis which might lead to far more serious fighting; Moscow rejected a Tokyo "ultimatum" over Sakhalin Island concessions. Page 4.

SENATOR PEPPER (Democrat), of Florida, last night led a militant Mayflower Hotel crowd of 1,500 in demands for revision of the neutrality act and embargo against Japan. Page 15.

G. O. P. Called In

By Robert C. Albright

Senate Republican leaders yesterday were invited to sound out minority sentiment on the pending neutrality issue and report their findings directly to the White House.

The unusual request was made following a Democratic leadership conference with the President on the neutrality bill impasse.

No definite decisions were reached at the conference, but the President was represented as unconvinced that Senate action on his 6-point neutrality program must be deferred until next session.

White House Denies Move.

Shortly after the conference, Senate Majority Leader Barkley invited Minority Leader McNary to query Republican Senators on their attitude toward postponement. Barkley would not say whether the President requested the check. He said he could not recall whether the move was discussed at the White House conference.

Reports quickly circulated that both McNary and his assistant, Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, will be asked to lay the composite Senate G. O. P. viewpoint before Mr. Roosevelt.

But at the White House it was said no invitation or arrangement had been made for such an interview, although the President would be happy to discuss the situation with Senate spokesmen at any time.

McNary Starts Poll

Senator McNary immediately began a verbal poll of Republican sentiment on the issue. He is understood to have ascertained that the Senate minority almost as a unit favors postponement, although several Republican Senators agree with the President's neutrality objectives.

If a White House conference is arranged to present the results of

Russian Actress Brutally Slain In Moscow Home

Moscow, July 17 (AP).—The brutal slaying of Zenaida Reich, actress wife of the former Bolshevik stage producer, Vsevolod Meyerhold, shocked Moscow today.

Found in her apartment with 11 knife wounds in her body, her eyes put out and her throat cut, she was rushed to a hospital, but died four hours later. Burglars were suspected. Zenaida Reich was reported taken in custody by Moscow secret police last Wednesday for unexplained reasons.

Her arrest followed that of her husband who had stood high in Bolshevist circles until his theater closed in 1938, when the party organ, Pravda, denounced the "anti-Soviet" tinge of some of his productions.

Rain to Follow 58-Degree Night

Washington yesterday slept through the coolest weather in two months. A minimum temperature of 58 degrees at 5:15 a. m. was the lowest recorded since May 19, and within six degrees of the lowest recorded mark for July, set in 1895, officials said.

The mercury rose to 82 at 4 p. m.

Today's weather will be mostly cloudy and slightly warmer, with showers tonight, the bureau said.

"A Half-Year Look at Business"

Prominent Stocks Rise $2 to $7, Tickers Lag as Sharp Increase Is Announced in Steel Production

By Frederick Gardner,
Associated Press Correspondent

New York, July 17.—A sudden buying wave sent security prices soaring in Wall Street today, the climax of a sensational six-month industrial improvement which in some instances was setting record high levels.

Some more prominent stocks rose $2 to $7 a share as heavy buying orders rolled into the market. The Associated Press composite price of 60 issues rose $2 to $49.90, the highest since June 29, 1938.

Helping start the day's buying rush, which reached its height in the last hour, when the ticker lagged as much as four minutes behind transactions for a time, was the announcement of a sharp rise in steel production this week.

Steel Production Rises

The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated operations at 58.4 per cent of capacity, the highest this year, compared with 49.7 last week.

United States Steel gained net $2.75, at $50, and Bethlehem $3.50, at $59.50. Chrysler soared $8.50, to close at $82. Du Pont finished at $157, up $7.25.

Transactions totaled 1,750,600 shares, the heaviest since March 31. Two weeks ago the volume dropped to around 235,000 shares, the smallest for a five-hour session in 17 years.

A year ago business was stirring in revival from one of the steepest and fastest declines in the Nation's economic history—the collapse of production in the autumn of 1937.

Progress toward higher levels since then has been uneven, influenced in part by gigantic armament programs abroad and at home. There has been the paradox of fairly good business news and extremely sluggish speculative markets, attributed chiefly to apprehension of approaching showdown in Europe.

The Bright Spots

High spots in today's vari-colored business picture include:

Record-breaking domestic consumption of gasoline, rayon and aircraft manufacturing.

Near-record output of electricity.

The highest level of residential building since 1929.

The biggest shipbuilding boom since World War years, largely growing out of Government orders for naval craft and merchant marine rehabilitation.

Wide gains in the first half of this year over 1938 in steel, motor, cotton textile, rubber and other important industries.

Record-breaking sales by some mail order houses and well-distrib-

Senate Extends Labor Act's Blacklist Scope

Walsh-Healey Law Amended to Include $4,000 Contracts

By the Associated Press

Revision of the Walsh-Healey public contracts act to bring smaller contractors within its scope and provide for a Government "blacklist" of violators of the Wagner labor act won Senate approval yesterday on a voice vote.

The measure now goes to the House.

The amendments would make the law applicable to contracts involving $4,000 or more, whereas the present law exempts all below $10,000. The Senate Labor Committee estimated that not more than 3 per cent of the number and 15 per cent of the total value of all Government contracts is covered by the existing law.

Fight Led by Taft.

Also brought under the law for the first time would be sub-contractors and contracts for services and the construction of ships and floating equipment.

As reported to the Senate, the amendments included a provision which would make contractors convicted of violating the Wagner labor act ineligible for three years to bid on Government contracts.

The Senate modified this, however, to provide that such contractors be taken off the "blacklist" after an administrative determination that they had "permanently" eliminated the violation.

Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio, led a fight against the provision.

"If a stronger penalty should be provided for violations of the national labor relations act," he told the Senate, "let's put it in that law where it belongs."

Senator Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, said the provision for "blacklisting" violators of the Wagner act, as well as violators of the Walsh-Healey act, had been put into the bill at the request of the C. I. O. and the A. F. of L.

40 German Army Vans Slip Into Danzig With Secret Cargo

By the Associated Press

Danzig, July 17.—Forty military supply trucks from East Prussia entered the Free City of Danzig tonight.

The big gray vans—locked up tight—sped into the city in close formation from the East Prussian city of Marienburg, near the Danzig border. They were driven by men in uniform.

The machines, accurately counted by observers on the Marienburg-Danzig highway, went to unknown destinations in the Free City.

The truck train reached Danzig shortly before the arrival here of the Nazi district leader, Albert Forster, who returned by airplane from conferences with Fuehrer Hitler at Munich and Berchtesgaden.

Forster hurried to his home without commenting on reports he had brought back a "definite plan" for the annexation of Danzig by Germany—one of the German demands that has caused Poland to mobilize 750,000 men.

The arrival of about 1,000 boys of the Hitler Youth organization from Germany tonight also lent a distinct Nazi atmosphere to Danzig streets.

The visitors in brown shirts and black shorts gathered for a pep meeting in Theater Square—where

WPA Strikes Fail; Lending Bill Rushed

Prevailing Wage Plea Of A.F.L. Unheeded; Morgenthau, Jones Back Loan Plan

As WPA strikes came to an end in most sections of the country, President William Green and other A. F. L. officials yesterday vainly urged Administration leaders in Congress to obtain restoration of the prevailing wage for relief workers.

Friends of the WPA in the House, virtually abandoning hope for revision of the new relief act at this session, tended to concentrate their force behind President Roosevelt's $2,800,000,000 lending measure and a $350,000,000 PWA revival bill of Representative Starnes (Democrat), of Alabama.

Meanwhile, the lending bill received hearty support from Secretary Morgenthau and Jesse H. Jones, new Federal lending administrator.

Morgenthau "Enthusiastic"

Morgenthau, scheduled to appear at Senate Banking and Currency Committee hearings on the measure today, said he was "enthusiastic" over the bill; while Jones, who yesterday was sworn in to his new post, asserted that the lending bill ought to be passed at this time.

In both House and Senate, however, legislators expressed doubt that the proposal will reach the President in anything like the form in which he transmitted it. Opposition centered chiefly about the projected toll roads and bridges and the railroad equipment loans, although Jones declared he was especially enthusiastic over the railroad plan.

Coinciding with reports that WPA strikers had gone back to work virtually everywhere but in Minnesota and Pennsylvania, Green's visit to Capitol Hill resulted in scant satisfaction for proponents of the prevailing wage.

After conferring with Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn, Green said he was given "little encouragement—or discouragement." He said the leaders referred him to the Appropriations Committee, which handles the relief bills, but he observed that from previous talks with ranking members of this group he expected no change in the law.

Green, who was accompanied by Harry Bates, president of the bricklayers and masons; George Q. Lynch, president of the patternmakers; John P. Frey, president of the metal trades department, and I. N. Ornburn, secretary of the Union Label Trades, next visited Vice President Garner.

Hands Tied, Garner Says

The A. F. of L. chief said the Vice President had pointed out that he made it a rule not to interfere with the legislative program. "I gained the impression," added Green, "that he felt there would be great difficulty in getting anything through this session."

Nevertheless, Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, insisted that he and 21 other Senatorial champions of the prevailing wage for WPA had not abandoned the fight, but were merely waiting for the strikes to terminate before they

Rep. Risk Burned In Effigy After Halting Pickets

Woonsocket, R. I., July 17 (AP).—Congressman Charles F. Risk (Republican), of Rhode Island, who obtained a temporary restraining order today against the picketing of his home in protest against his relief vote, was burned in effigy tonight before thousands of persons in a busy square.

A dummy representing Risk, with a lily in a coat lapel and a copy of the Congressional Record in a pocket, dangled from a third-story window of the Independent Textile Union headquarters while officers of the union, some named in the restraining order, conducted a mock trial in the street.

After the trial, the dummy was carried at the head of a parade of 50 automobiles through 3 miles of Woonsocket streets, decapitated by an automobile, and then set afire.

U.S. Jury Holds 5 Long Aides For Mail Fraud

Murphy, Hoover on Way To New Orleans; Weiss, Smith Among Indicted

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, July 17.—Seymour Weiss, New York and New Orleans hotel man and topflight Louisiana politician, was indicted with four others today on two counts of using the mails to defraud.

Others named were Dr. James Monroe Smith, former president of Louisiana State University, now under 24 State indictments ranging from forgery to embezzlement; Louis C. Lesage, special assistant to the president of the Standard Oil Co., of Louisiana; Monte E. Hart, member of a contracting firm which has done much State construction, and J. Emory Adams, nephew of Mrs. James Monroe Smith.

The indictments charged the five men split between them $75,000 obtained by defrauding Louisiana State University, the State and taxpayers in a deal involving fixtures of the Bienville Hotel in New Orleans, which was purchased by the university several years ago.

The charges carry a maximum penalty of 5 years in jail and a fine of $1,000. Bond for the men was set at $10,000 each by Federal Judge Wayne C. Bohah.

A New Orleans hotel announced Attorney General Murphy and J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, were expected here tomorrow, but the

28 Blast Dead Brought Up From Kentucky Mine

Providence, Ky., July 17 (AP).—One by one, the canvas-shrouded bodies of 28 mine explosion victims—9 of whom were found dead early today—were being brought to the surface tonight by rescue workers.

The miners' lives were snuffed out in last Friday night's blast deep in the workings of the Duvin Coal Co. They included the nine who barricaded themselves 280 feet underground in a desperate effort to "seal in" against deadly gas. Bodies of 19 others were found Saturday.

Providence's committee of five leading citizens meantime pushed ahead to raise $125,000 by subscription for families of the victims.

Girl, 5, Here Dies Of Match Burns

Joanne Bashelor, 5, of 814 Central avenue, Capitol Heights, Md., died in Emergency Hospital early yesterday of burns received when a box of matches exploded in her hands as she played at her home Sunday.

Her mother and father, Earl and Annie Dale Bashelor, were treated at Emergency for burns they suffered in beating out the flames that fired the child's dress. Three sisters, Ann, Carolyn, and Blanche, and two brothers, Richard and James, survive.

System Similar to Schoolboy Patrols May Be Given Trial

As a trial effort toward ultimate solution of the District playground problem, Commissioner Hazen last night said he wanted "one or two of the play areas to be opened this week to be operated by the children themselves."

"Look what the children have done with their traffic cop work. I feel sure they could make a go of this," he declared.

The Commissioner's suggestion was hailed with delight by seven youngsters at the Barney Neighborhood House, members of schoolboy patrols who have been on playground patrol duty at the Hoover Playground since school closed. They volunteered at once to assist any other ground within reach, where their experience and sense of responsibility might be useful.

One of the boys, Henry Butler, 13, is now serving as life guard at the wading pool at Hoover playground, and with others helps children across the roads to and from the gates. The others are Charles, 12, and Hoyt Butler, jr., 14; Corbin Stanford, 14; George Boswell, 14, captain of the Jefferson School patrol; Thomas Wolfrey, 14, and James Murphy, 14.

Girl Scout Volunteers

Betsy Ketner, 15, was the first Girl Scout to volunteer for the work. "I think it will be swell if we can get the playgrounds open," she said, offering to do her "good turn" by looking out for younger children, although she had expected to play most of the summer at Bunker Hill Park. Betsy has been patrol leader at Langdon Park, and wears four Scout merit badges.

Commissioner Hazen yesterday named Engineer Commissioner McCoach to represent the District Government on a two-member sub-committee which will function with the new District of Columbia Recreation Commission. He said he asked McCoach to work for the child-operated playground plan.

McCoach will serve with C. Melvin Sharpe, a member of the Board of Education, on the sub-committee, which will function under the commission, which Lewis R. Barrett heads.

Barrett will meet with District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan this morning to discuss personnel and pay changes that may result from the new playground grouping.

Approximately 25 grounds may be placed in operation by the end of the week, Barrett said. "We are going to start in where the need is worst," he declared.

Senate Votes Ban on Movie Block-Booking

Party Lines Crossed in 46-28 Ballot; House Passage Doubtful

The Senate yesterday voted, 46 to 28, to ban compulsory block-booking and blind selling of films by "Big Eight" producer-distributors to motion picture exhibitors.

The measure drawn by Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, outlaws the practice of leasing "sight unseen" large blocks of pictures, with exhibitors allegedly forced to take all of the pictures or none.

The bill was sent to the House, where it is accorded little chance in the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Party Lines Crossed

Nine Republicans joined with 33 Democrats, two Farmer-Laborites, one Independent and one Progressive in support of the bill, while 19 Democrats and 9 Republicans voted against it.

Party lines also were crossed when a Republican, Senator Capper, of Kansas, took the floor in a plea for the measure—and a Democrat, Senator King, of Utah, assailed it.

Neely charged pictures usually are leased by the "Big Eight" before they have been produced—and with little or no information concerning the character or quality of the pictures to be delivered, the stories that will be filmed or the treatment to be accorded such material.

Kuhn denied all charges made yesterday by police after an American "beer hall putsch" had failed.

'Break' Near in River Slaying; Killer Believed a D. C. Man

Baffled almost a week by the murder of an unidentified man found floating in the Potomac near Marshall Hall, Md., Charles County authorities last night promised an early break in the case and indicated the man and his slayer lived in Washington.

Sheriff Robert V. Cooksey revealed the murdered man, dressed in the same dark gray suit that clung to the body when it was dragged from the river, was seen at Marshall Hall earlier the same day by William H. Cook, a carpenter at the resort.

Coupled to Cook's statement was the fact a watch in a pocket of the suit was running when the body was recovered, indicating it had been in the river but a few hours.

Although the sheriff said that a trip he took to Baltimore yesterday to identify the victim through a pair of eyeglasses found on the body has proved fruitless so far, his office staff had an air of tense excitement.

The bizarre case, which stemmed from the discovery that there was no water in the lungs of the man when he was taken from the river, and that he had been severely beaten about the head, was temporarily complicated Saturday when the body was wrongly identified by

Reorganization Blocked

By James D. Secrest.

Knifed by the commissioners' "kitchen cabinet," the Kennedy reorganization bill was laid to rest for this session yesterday by a subcommittee of the House District Committee, with the understanding that members meanwhile will put on paper their own ideas for reform of the National Capital's government.

A few hours previously the House District Committee, acting in capacity of a quasi-city council, presented an illustration of the operation of the present city control by adjournment with nine important local bills untouched.

The abrupt adjournment, effected by a no quorum point of order, was brought about by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, in retaliation against members who filibustered against his milk control bill a week ago.

Kennedy Disappointed

Chairman Kennedy, obviously disappointed over refusal of his subcommittee to act on the reorganization measure, gloomily cited the fate of previous reorganization proposals.

He told the subcommittee that "up to $10,000 a day" could be saved the District government if the reforms were approved by this session of Congress.

The motion to defer action until next year was made by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and supported by all members of the subcommittee except the chairman.

The members, each of whom said he will put in writing his own ideas for reorganizing the District government before Congress reconvenes in January, are Representatives Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois; Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, and McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi.

Allen Undismayed

Upon another motion offered by Nichols the commissioners were instructed to submit to the sub-committee before December 1 a critical analysis of the Kennedy bill and, if they disapproved of it, their own alternative plan.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who attended the meeting with a score of other District officials, refused to be discouraged over the subcommittee's action.

"We're still going to get a reorganization bill," he predicted. "Reorganization is always unpopular and takes time to accomplish."

The status of E. O. Griffenhagen & Associates meanwhile is uncertain as no funds are available to continue to pay for their specialized services.

Frank O. Everett, vice president of the Chicago firm, said the specialists stood ready to "see this through" if the subcommittee, or Chairman Kennedy, wishes it.

The current District supply bill carries $12,500 to pay Griffenhagen "for services heretofore or hereafter rendered" to the District, thereby forestalling any subsequent appropriation. The 1939 act gave the firm $5,000 but this was exhausted long before the report was completed.

Asked what would become of the Griffenhagen aides, Kennedy said: "I guess we'll have to dismiss them."

Representative Dirksen, who stated he is opposed to the whole theory of government proposed by the Kennedy bill, promised Allen he will submit his own design to

CONFIDENTIAL STUFF

Much of the mystery surrounding confidential "tips" on Capital news is due to the manner it's told to you. A few false-beard words, a melodramatic phrase used like a 10-cent mask, a sprinkling of secretive adjectives (straight from the pirate caves of our boyhood), and you swallow the obvious as if it were the low-down from the inner sanctum. Here are a few typical samples, to make you familiar with the technique.

Harlan Miller

"Right now the Navy Department is keeping it a dark secret, but I have it from the loftiest authority that part of the American fleet is now in the Atlantic Ocean, while another part is in the Pacific. The admirals may deny this, but you can tattoo it on your chest."

* * * *

"First reports indicated that Senators George and Gillette cast the deciding votes to block the neutrality bill. But what actually happened was that Senators Gillette and George—not George and Gillette, mind you—threw their strength against the bill at the last minute."

"—from the inner sanctum"

"Via a leak in the Cabinet, this column learns that Roosevelt and Garner had another bitter quarrel at the last Cabinet meeting. Garner contended that Washington should never have sold First Baseman Zeke Bonura to the Giants. The President held that to stop Clark Griffith from selling his good ball players would be interference with private enterprise."

* * * *

"All the generals will deny this to the high heavens, but I have it from a confidential source at the War Department that all Army target practice is now being held with real cartridges. The shooting of blanks at distances over 10 yards was tabooed by Gen. Marshall, the new Chief of Staff. This disturbing news hasn't yet reached Capitol Hill, but is well known in Belgrade and Brussels."

* * * *

"Off the record, the President is telling White House intimates by implication that he may or may not be a candidate for a third term. He hasn't said a word about third term even to his valet. But he is firmly opposed to every other candidate, which leaves only himself. And Roosevelt isn't the kind of man to leave the Republic high and dry without any President."

"—a leak in the Navy"

"You won't see it in the headlines for several weeks, but among those considered for Secretary of the Navy are Admiral Richard Byrd, Commodore Harold Vanderbilt, the America's Cup defender, and Gar Wood, the speedboat racer. Byrd plans a flank attack on aggressor nations via the South Pole. . . . The coach of the California crew and the winner of the single sculls are only outside possibilities. We got this from a bos'n's mate on the aircraft carrier Saratoga."

* * * *

"Even the President doesn't know this yet, but behind the scenes the Republicans are organizing a 'draft Roosevelt' movement. They are doing this skillfully by batting down every other candidate whose head is stuck above the New Deal ramparts. This is straight from the Democratic wife of a G. O. P. Senator. He'd stop her allowance if I mentioned her name."

* * * *

Well, these are just a few typical samples. Don't overlook the quotation marks; I can't vouch for these inside tips myself. All I know is what I see and what people tell me, and if they tell me things in confidence I don't print them, even when they make it plain they want 'em printed. But that's strictly off the record, just between us, under your hat.

Roosevelt Invited To Key Fete

Senator Radcliffe (Democrat), of Maryland, invited President Roosevelt yesterday to attend a celebration September 12 at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, of the 125th anniversary of the writing of the "Star-Spangled Banner." The national anthem was written by Francis Scott Key while British ships were bombarding the fort during the War of 1812.

FDIC Renews Fight to Curb Bank Chains

Report to Congress Cites Difficulties In Their Supervision

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation again urged Congress yesterday to pass legislation to prevent further concentration of control over banks through the device of holding companies.

In its annual report for 1938 the agency called attention to a previous recommendation in which it stressed the need for such legislation.

President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau have favored legislation to dissolve, or at least to prevent expansion of, bank holding companies. Legislation to stop expansion was introduced at the 1938 session by Senator Glass, veteran Virginia Democrat, but it was blocked, and no effort has been made this session to revive it.

The RDIC declared, meanwhile, that "susstantial consistency and uniformity" in bank supervision had been attained as a result of a long series of conferences among both Federal and State banking authorities.

This assertion was at variance with statements made by the Federal Reserve Board in its annual report for 1938, which was submitted to Congress last January.

"The conflicts of authority in bank supervision," the board declared, "cause much confusion and delay and not infrequently prevent prompt action in cases where quick decision is necessary to prevent losses to the public and to remedy critical situations."

Duplications Denied

The FDIC also emphaized that no duplication—at least not to amount to anything—exists in the examination of banks by Federal supervisory agencies.

The Reserve Board in its annual report said pretty much the same thing. But it took a different tack by pointing out that the legal auhority exists whereby each of the three Federal agencies could examine the same bank if they chose to exercise the authority.

Such duplication is avoided, the board explained, only by co-operative arrangements whereby the agencies accept each other's examinations. By this means, national banks are examined by the Office of Comptroller of the Currency, State-chartered banks which are members of the Reserve System by the Reserve Board, and State-chartered banks which are not Reserve System members by the FDIC.

Morgenthau Sides with FDIC

Asked about the matter at a press conference, Morgenthau sided with the FDIC, saying since the uniform bank examination code was put into effect he had heard of no complaints about overlapping of bank supervisory authority.

A controversy of long standing exists among Federal banking agencies, it is recalled, over the question of consolidating bank supervisory functions in a single Federal agency. The Reserve Board, spurred by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, has argued that bank supervision should be a part of the credit control machinery. The FDIC and Comptroller's Office have disputed this, and have had Morgenthau's support.

Supervision Made Difficult

In the matter of holding company regulation, the FDIC called attention to a previous statement in which it said that "difficulties of examination and supervision multiply with the growth of banking organizations controlled by single interests."

Emphasis on the need for holding company regulation recalls the stock delisting proceeding instituted last winter by the Securities and Exchange Commission against the Giannini-controlled Transamerica Corporation, largest of the bank holding companies. Efforts by the SEC to discipline the big California group bank organization provoked a succession of court battles.

Conference Called In Effort to Halt Packing Strike

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—The city council's labor committee, seeking today to avert a strike in the packing industry, arranged a conference with officials of Armour & Co.

G. A. Eastwood, executive vice president of Armour, notified Alderman William A. Rowan, chairman of the council group, that representatives of the concern would meet committee members Thursday.

Officers of the Packing House Workers Organizing Committee were not invited to the parley since they appeared before the council committee recently and laid their case before the aldermen.

Members of the P. W. O. C., an affiliate of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, empowered their chiefs and national bargaining committees yesterday to call strikes against any packing plant where they claim a majority of the employes if the packers declined to negotiate contracts.

Court Annuls Wallace Curb On Swift & Co.

Says Secretary Can't Outlaw Packing Firm's Credit Practices

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 17.—The United States Circuit Court of Appeals today set aside Secretary of Agriculture Wallace's order that Swift & Co. "cease and desist" from alleged unfair trade practices.

The decision upheld the meat packing company's petition denying that its credit, discount and weight practices were "unjustly discriminatory."

The Appellate Court decision, written by Judge Walter E. Treanor and concurred in by Judges J. Earl Major and Otto Kerner, held the Secretary of Agriculture was not empowered to issue an order of that type under the stockyards and packers act.

Wallace, following hearings in New York City in 1937, had charged the company extended terms of credit to certain customers from 30 to 90 days and limited its credit terms to other purchasers to periods of from five to seven days.

The company's appeal asserted the proceedings had been instituted "for the sole benefit of a small group of purveyors" of meat in the New York area and that the effect of the desist order would be to aid "an effort to drive Swift & Co. out of competition with these purveyors."

The Appellate Court's decision stated there was "no finding that the credit terms are in themselves objectionable according to the standards of trade."

The court also found that Wallace's order was "fundamentally defective" in that it required Swift & Co. either to give up its lucrative business with institutional buyers or to extend the same credit terms to all its customers—even to one having the lowest credit rating.

The opinion said the Secretary's order "presupposes a power at least as comprehensive as the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission in its field" and observed that such power could be exercised effectively only by treating the packing industry as a public utility.

"We find no evidence in the act of an intention by Congress to confer such a power upon the Secretary of Agriculture," the decision held.

Credit Union Averts Payless Payday at Zoo

The Smithsonian Institution Employes Credit Union hopes to sign up some new members this week.

When Congressional failure to act on the District revenue bill brought a payless pay day to the Capital Saturday, the credit union came through with $6,700 for 112 employes of the Zoo. Zoo workers, though technically employed by Smithsonian, get paid—most of the time—by the District.

FBI Seeks Violations In Sugar Act of 1937

By the United Press.

Attorney General Frank Murphy last night announced that the Federal Bureau of Investigation is inquiring into alleged violations of citizenship rights in connection with administration of the sugar act of 1937 in Louisiana.

He said that the investigation was undertaken at the request of Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, who transmitted certain information to the Department of Justice. He did not elaborate.

WPA Strikes Fade; Lending Bill Sped

resumed pressure for revision of the relief act.

At the other end of the Capitol, however, the Appropriations Committee presents an almost insurmountable barrier against alteration of the law. Consequently, members of the "liberal bloc" are now hoping to appease organized labor by preserving as much as possible of the self-liquidating loan bill, due to be reported from the House Banking and Currency Committee within a week.

An effort will be made to persuade the House to substitute, for the non-Federal public works section of the bill the Starnes bill granting the PWA $350,000,000, of which $300,000,000 would be available for non-Federal projects on a basis of 30 per cent Federal grant and 70 per cent loan, compared with the present ratio of 45 to 55.

If they can obtain a budget estimate for the PWA appropriation, advocates of the Starnes bill have high hopes of its passage, but they claim that even without budgetary O. K. the PWA has enough friends in Congress to give the proposal a chance of success.

It was pointed out that the PWA, popular with the A. F. of L., gives employment particularly to building trades workers, the very group that has been complaining most emphatically about the new WPA regulations.

In explaining the railroad equipment loans under the proposed lending program, Jones said the RFC would be enabled to finance the installment purchase of new equipment. He said the RFC planned not to buy equipment on a large scale, or build any, but to assist railroads in buying it.

Jones predicted that the interest rate for self-liquidating loans to municipalities would be low enough to substantially make up for abandonment of the 45 per cent PWA grant.

Power Commission To Probe Pa. Firm

By the Associated Press

The power commission announced last night it would conduct a hearing in Washington September 18 on rates charged by the Safe Harbor Water Power Corporation of Pennsylvania for electricity sold to the Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore and the Pennsylvania Water & Power Co.

The commisison said the hearing would determine whether the agreement for the sale violated any provision of the Federal power act or whether the rates were unjust or discriminatory.

Roosevelt Seeks to Speed New Sea Bases

Confers With Naval Chiefs on Overtime Work Proposal

President Roosevelt discussed with ranking naval officials yesterday means of speeding to completion a chain of outlying naval bases recently voted by Congress.

By use of special "cost-plus-fixed-fee" contracts and authority to work employes 10 to 12 hours a day—with overtime pay—the Nation's new "armed frontier" should be completed months earlier than if normal procedure were used, the Navy chiefs reported. The President was represented as urging them to keep costs down insofar as possible without weakening defenses or delaying construction.

Meanwhile, the Administration pressed its proposal to strengthen hemisphere defense plans by constructing warships and making munitions for Latin American republics in United States Government arsenals. Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles appeared before the House Foreign Affairs Committee to urge approval of the measure, and Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, and Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, acting Army chief of staff, will testify today.

Chairman Bloom indicated the Foreign Affairs Committee will report the measure today, after incorporating Republican amendments requiring cash payments for the war materials. He said that Latin-American republics had given unanimous indorsement to the bill.

Present at the White House conference were Admiral Leahy, Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief civil engineer; Rear Admiral Ray Spear, paymaster general; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general, and the President's personal physician, and Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, naval aide to the President.

The bases will be constructed at Midway, Johnston, Palmyra and Hawaii in the mid-Pacific, at Kodiak and Sitka, Alaska; Jacksonville, Fla., and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Bill to Aid Small Business Is Abandoned

Administration Holds Passage Hopeless at Present Session

The Administration has abandoned efforts to draft legislation for enactment at this session of Congress making long-term loans more accessible to small business concerns, it was learned yesterday.

Due to the pressure of other legislation—particularly the lending and neutrality measures—and the impatience of Congress to adjourn, passage of such a bill now is regarded as hopeless.

Meanwhile, Jesse H. Jones, who yesterday took the oath of office as Federal Loan Administrator, and Emil Schram, his successor as chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, declared at a press conference that the RFC already has ample authority to supply the legitimate credit needs of small concerns.

RFC Has Greater Powers

They said there was no necessity for the enactment of the loan insurance bill offered by Senator Mead, New York Democrat, since the RFC has more loan-making powers than the Mead bill would give it.

The Mead proposal would have the RFC insure loans to small businesses. Banks would make the loans, and would stand to lose the first 10 per cent on each. The RFC would insure the remaining 90 per cent, and, of course, if the loan proved a total loss, would be out 90 percent of it.

Jones told the Senate Banking Committee a short time ago that the Mead bill would encourage banks to unload existing bad loans on the RFC, although the RFC would try to prevent them.

Officials Unable to Agree

One reason efforts to obtain legislation at this session has been dropped, it was indicated, was the inability of officials to agree among themselves as to what the bill should provide.

With Secretary of Commerce Hopkins acting as a kind of overseer or co-ordinator, officials tried to use the Mead bill as the basis for a compromise measure.

Several New Dealers felt that a variation of the Mead bill should be passed now, as a kind of stop-gap pending the working out of a bill creating a system of industrial banks to finance small concerns. Others, like Mead, were willing to go along with any satisfactory variation of the loan insurance idea, but were opposed to creating a new banking system.

Eccles Frowned on Bill

Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Reserve Board, however, frowned on the Mead bill. Eccles, insisting that it would prove worthless, since the RFC already had more powers than it conveyed, advocated a loan insurance corporation within the Reserve System to make and insure small business loans.

Mead, it was learned, still hopes for a favorable report from the Senate Banking Committee on his bill. But sponsors of the legislation concede that chances for action at this session are virtually nil.

President Vetoes Medical Aid for Foreign Service

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a bill to provide hospitalization and medical and dental care for foreign service employes of the State Department.

Such care now is confined almost entirely to the Army, Navy and Coast Guard.

"There seems no reason," Mr. Roosevelt wrote the House, "why such facilities should be extended to officers and employes in the foreign service within the State Department without including all the other employes within the State Department. If this is done for the State Department it should logically be done for the employes of other departments."

On Capitol Hill

Senate Judiciary Committee Approves Charles A. Jones as Appeals Court Judge

The Senate Judiciary Committee approved unanimously yesterday the nomination of Charles Alvin Jones, of Pittsburgh, to be a judge of the Third Circuit Court of Appeals.

C. A. JONES

The committee also recommended Senate confirmation of Samuel O. Clark, jr., of Connecticut, to be Assistant Attorney General in charge of the Tax Division.

The House formally elected Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, chairman of its Foreign Affairs Committee. He succeeds the late Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), of Tennessee. The House also put Representative Courtney (Democrat), of Tennessee, on the committee.

More than 500 new clerks would be put to work by members of Congress under legislation finally approved by the House yesterday.

It permits each Senator and Representative to hire an extra helper at $1,500 a year. Senators from States with a population of 3,000,000 could hire still another clerk.

The only step now necessary to send the bill to the White House is Senate action on a conference report.

Senator Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio, disclosed that he has been ordered by his physician to take a rest and that he will leave Washington within a few days to spend the remainder of the summer at his home.

Asked about reports that he was to make a study of the Ohio political situation for President Roosevelt, Donahey replied that he isn't making surveys for anybody.

After a brief quarrel which failed to break a deadlock, the Senate postponed action on an appropriation for the Senate Civil Liberties Committee to complete its investigation of the Associated Farmers, a West Coast organization.

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, a co-sponsor with Senator Downey (Democrat), of California, of a resolution providing $100,000 for the committee, accused Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Audit and Control Committee, of holding up action on the resolution.

Byrnes pointed out the Civil Liberties Committee, headed by Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, had promised to terminate its investigation of industrial welfare last year and recommend legislation. La Follette retorted the committee had recommended legislation, but declared conditions on the West Coast justified further investigation.

The House passed a Senate bill extending until February 1, 1941, the effective date of provisions of laws restricting interlocking bank directorates.

Mob Tries to Stone Groom, 60, And His Child Bride, 16

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Carmelo Locapira, 60, and Torsilla Minichielli, his 16-year-old bride managed to smile for the camera, although their attempt at a honeymoon has been a series of headaches. Uninvited guests attended their wedding, protesting that he was too old to marry her. Police cleared the aisles while the wedding was performed, and yesterday their wedding breakfast was interrupted by a stone thrown through their apartment window

New York Riot Squads Save Couple From 'Little Italy' Crowd After They Retreat From Turbulent Wedding

By the Associated Press

New York, July 17.—Police riot squads tonight protected the "December-May" honeymooners—60-year-old Carmelo Locapira and his 16-year-old bride, Torsilla Minichielli, a seventh grade schoolgirl—after a threatening crowd of 150 persons gathered outside their apartment house.

A rock, shattering a windowpane of their barricaded apartment, interrupted the couple's wedding breakfast and brought three radio cars of police to prevent further destruction.

"There'll be no honeymoon," said the gray-haired, bespectacled husband. "Things are exciting enough already."

His dark-eyed bride sobbed hysterically.

In mid-afternoon, about 20 youngsters appeared and began heaving stones at the third-floor apartment window. Police quickly dispersed them.

Shortly after the breakfast stone-throwing episode, a man Locapira identified as his first wife's brother, Joe Banacci, banged on the newlyweds' door and shouted at Locapira to "get out" of the apartment, asserting that the furniture belonged to his sister, who died 18 months ago.

When police arrived, Banacci had disappeared.

Repeated riot calls marked the couple's wedding at the Roman Catholic Church of St. Anthony of Padua last night, with police, firemen and an ambulance responding as the church was packed with muttering, uninvited guests.

Stirring pro-and-con arguments throughout New York's populous "Little Italy"—mostly shrill-voiced protests that Locapira was "too old" to marry such a young girl—the wedding knot was finally tied after police had cleared the aisles and the priest had made himself heard, on the third effort, in asking above the shouted impreeations:

"Who gives consent to this girl's marriage to this man?"

The girl's father, janitor in a building owned by Locapira, boomed: "I do!"

Fourteen uniformed police, three radio cars, 10 firetrucks and an ambulance responded to calls to the wedding scence, which Locapira reached white-faced and shaking after fleeing from a crowd of pursuers.

60 Poisoned At Maryland Church Picnic

Whole Families Are Stricken; Spread of Malady Is Feared

By the Associated Press

Salisbury, Md., July 17.—Overworked physicians tonight feared the food poisoning which felled more than 60 persons who attended a church picnic at Hebron Saturday was a virulent type of contagious dysentery.

Dr. D. S. Fisher, acting health officer for Wicomico County, said every sanitary precaution was being taken to prevent spread of the malady, which struck virtually every picnicker who attended the event sponsored by the Methodist Protestant Church in the community six mile from here.

Victims of the poisoning were racked by peristaltic convulsions of the intestines and persistent vomiting. All ages seemed equally affected. Dr. William Emrich, only physician in Hebron, a town of 900, had patients on every street.

"Some of the victims are critically ill," Dr. Emrich said. "We are hopeful, however, that all will eventually recover."

Dr. Fisher had State health department technicians taking laboratory specimens from all those affected today. Bacteriological examination will take some time, and the exact nature of the disease cannot be determined until after clinical tests.

The physicians, however, said the symptoms indicated contagious dysentery.

Dr. Emrich has been working day and night since the first victims collapsed Saturday night. Since then there has been a steady flow of calls to his office, as more and more participants in the picnic supper fell ill.

County nurses told that able members of families stopped their cars on rural lanes to beg treatment for stricken members of their families.

Health authorities were inclined to blame home-made ice-cream.

George W. Trowbridge, 84, for 31 years connected with the Internal Revenue Department, died yesterday at his home, 3160 Nebraska avenue northwest, after two months' illness.

Mr. Trowbridge was born in Green Valley, Ill., and entered the railroad business in Chicago at the age of 18. He made his home in Washington in 1898, when he was appointed internal revenue agent in charge of the Baltimore office.

He subsequently was in charge of offices in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, and Indianapolis before returning to Washington in 1918. He then specialized in income tax work until his retirement in 1929.

Woodring Rejects Battery-Brooklyn Span

Declaring that such a bridge would constitute a potential hazard in an emergency, Secretary of War Woodring yesterday announced rejection of plans of the New York Tri-Borough Bridge Authority for a bridge connecting the Battery in Manhattan with Brooklyn.

In a letter to Robert Moses, chairman of the authority, Woodring said the two bridges already spanning the East River constitute a hazard to access from the sea to the Brooklyn Navy Yard in time of emergency. Instead of constructing a third bridge, Woodring recommended replacement of the two existing spans by tunnels when they have ended their period of safe life.

Britain Denies Japan Asked Policy Changes

Chamberlain Makes Plain Such Request Would Be Refused

By the Associated Press

London, July 17.—Japan's willingness to negotiate the Tientsin dispute on the basis of local issues rather than the wider question of Britain's policy in China has been indicated in preliminary Tokyo talks, Prime Minister Chamberlain said today.

At the same time he told the House of Commons Britain "would not and could not" alter her foreign policy in the Far East at "the demand of another power."

He said British Ambassador Craigie and Japanese Foreign Minister Arita had gone over broad issues in their talk Saturday but that Japan had not "suggested that discussion or settlement of this general question should be a condition of negotiations."

Japan Seeks "Understanding"

Chamberlain denied also that Japan had demanded any reversal of British policy in the Far East although Japan did want Britain to "regard Chinese-Japanese hostilities with more understanding of Japan's . . . side of the case."

"There have been many statements in the press both in Japan and this country," Chamberlain said, "that the Japanese government will require a fundamental reversal of the Far Eastern policy of His Majesty's government as a condition for opening negotiations.

"I should like to make it clear that this country would not and could not so act in regard to its foreign policy at the demand of another power, nor has His Majesty's government received any such demand from the Japanese government."

Conference Postponed

Tokyo (Tuesday), July 18 (AP).—A request that Britain recognize "the necessity" of the Japanese army's operations in China was advanced today as a major reason for the temporary postponement of Japanese-British talks here on the Tientsin dispute.

This reason was given by observers after the second meeting between Foreign Minister Arita and British Ambassador Craigie was postponed yesterday until tomorrow with the official explanation that Craigie "has not received the views of his home government."

Sir Robert Awaits Answer

A reliable source said the most important point laid before the ambassador at their first meeting Saturday was the question: "Is Britain willing to concede the necessity of the Japanese military operations in China?"

Sir Robert was reported to have declined to reply pending consultation with London.

Some Tokyo quarters expressed the opinion that British agreement on this point would be tantamount to recognizing belligerent rights for Japan.

Such an agreement, it was said, would permit the Japanese army to exercise much more stringent control, not only over Britain's concessions but also her nationals and their privileges throughout China.

Britain to Inform U. S.

London, July 17 (U.P.).—Officials said tonight the government will inform the United States minutely regarding all details of the Anglo-Japanese negotiations. A complete summary of Saturday's conversation has been turned over to the American embassy in Tokyo, it was said.

Paris, July 17 (AP).—Two German steamers loaded with Jewish refugees have been given temporary refuge at Beirut, Lebanon, following the outbreak of disease among the passengers, French authorities announced today.

Another German refugee ship, found to be free from disease, was put back to sea with 800 passengers. A fourth ship, 700 on board, was reported in the same region seeking to land its refugees.

72 German War Dead Leave France

Besancon, France, July 17 (AP).—The bones of 72 German soldiers who died in France in the World War were started homeward tonight from the Besancon Cemetery.

Bones and remnants of uniforms were placed in swastika-covered coffins, tagged with German names, recorded at the time of burial. The transfer of bodies is carried out under a long-standing agreement between the French and German governments.

War Damage Plans Drafted in Britain

A comprehensive scheme for wartime control over production and distribution of coal, gas and electricity was announced by Geoffrey

G. O. P. Aid Asked On Neutrality

this survey, it is expected to take place today or tomorrow.

Meantime Senate Majority Leader Barkley told reporters he did not regard the situation as "hopeless." Nonetheless, Barkley said, no decision has been reached on a course of action, or whether any attempt will be made to revive the bill sidetracked last week by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"There are three things that could be done," said Barkley, "but I cannot prophesy whether any of them will be."

The three possibilities for revival he summarized as follows:

A vote to reconsider by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, but this would entail at least one Senator changing his vote.

A Senate motion to discharge the Foreign Relations Committee from consideration of the bill, This would require a majority vote of the Senate.

Submission of the neutrality bill as an amendment to some other pending legislation, thereby carrying the issue directly to the floor.

A pessimistic report on each of these prospects is believed to have been made to the President yesterday by some of his legislative leaders. The 12-to-11 vote by which the committee voted to postpone action was regarded as frozen for the session. With solid Republican opposition, a motion to discharge the committee would face probable defeat.

The bill could be offered as a legislative "rider" on some other measure, but in that event the leadership would run head on into isolationist threats to debate the issue "all summer."

Some believed that if McNary told the President his Republican followers opposed as a unit any action this session, that would settle the issue for the time being. With neutrality removed from the agenda, adjournment might follow in two or three weeks, but with the very live prospect that Congress would be summoned back into special session if international events took a serious turn. In the interim, or even before adjournment, President Roosevelt has been urged in some quarters to carry the issue the country in a fireside chat.

The Republican leadership itself is not in agreement on merits of the 6-point neutrality program, but was said to be a unit in favor of delaying Senate action.

Senator Austin, for example, agrees with Mr. Roosevelt on repeal of the arms embargo, but is opposed to power for the President to establish combat zones. Regardless of his sympathy for the program in the main, Austin took the view that no European war will develop before Congress returns, and it may be "wise" to delay action until the country is heard from.

McNary reputedly is opposed to the legislation and thinks Congress should adjourn immediately and go home. The Senate minority leader, who has been ill, said he plans to return to his Oregon home next week whether Congress adjourns or not.

Much of the Senate pressure for postponement of neutrality action has come from the Republican side.

Attending yesterday's leadership conference with the President were Secretary of State Hull, Vice President Garner, Barkley, Speaker Bankhead and House Majority Leader Bankhead and House Majority Leader Rayburn.

Immediately following the conference, Barkley told reporters:

"I do not think that Congress should deliberately adjourn in the face of any duty it might be called upon to perform."

Although unusual, calling in of Republican leaders by the President would not be unprecedented, it was pointed out. On one or two prior occasions the President has called McNary to the White House to sound out his views on major issues. Mr. Roosevelt was described by one Senator as anxious to satisfy himself that everything possible is being done to move the legislation.

Meanwhile, Speaker Bankhead said the House will be ready to adjourn in two weeks, or "maybe three, to clean up unfinished business." The House already has passed the neutrality bill, but greatly modified so as to retain a partial arms embargo.

U. S. Is Joining Spy Data Pool, Paris Reports

Officer Says F. B. I. Will Aid French, British Hunt Axis Agents

By the United Press.

Paris, July 17.—French sources tonight said the United States, British and French governments had agreed to exchange information about German and Italian espionage activities.

The agreement, it was said, came as a direct result of the exposure and expulsion from France of Otto Abetz, Nazi propaganda and espionage agent, and was aimed at breaking up spy rings such as that uncovered in France last week and in the United States several months ago.

A high French intelligence officer said tonight that an estimated 10,000 spies and informants are active in Europe and America today with almost half that number of counter-espionage agents on their trails.

Collaboration between American agents of the F. B. I. and British intelligence officers was instrumental in exposing the German spy plot in the United States. Now France's famous "second bureau," in charge of counter-espionage, has agreed to send regularly to London and Washigton full records of espionage activities known to French secret police.

50 Suspects Listed

London, July 17 (INS). — Great Britain tonight launched a counter campaign against increased German espionage in England, with the foreign office turning over to the army intelligence service a list of 50 suspected Nazi agents.

The street leading from it to Mussolini platz will be renamed Mussolini strasse.

Mongol War ShowdownDue, Japanese Say

Issue to Be Settled in 48 Hours, Is Belief Among Manchukuoans

By the Associated Press

Hsingking, Manchukuo (Tuesday) July 18.—The next 48 hours will determine whether border warfare between Soviet-Mongolian and Japanese-Manchukuo forces flares into the most extensive fighting in five years, an authoritative source said here today.

The result either may be diplomatic negotiations in Moscow or retaliation for Soviet air raids on railway centers in Manchukuo.

This source expressed belief events were leading to a second Russo-Japanese war which would be advantageous to Japan if it occurred within a year because Japan has assembled veteran troops near the Soviet border in China while Russia is utilizing recruits.

In Shanghai, however, a Japanese military spokesman predicted the warfare would be localized.

Although this official discounted the likelihood there would be general warfare, he reiterated Japan's determination to retaliate against any further Soviet air raids against Manchukuo.

Eight Soviet planes were reported to have bombed Halunarshan, Manchukuo, today within a few hours after the Japanese protested to the Outer Mongolain government against three precious aerial forays.

Domei, Japanese news agency, reported four Manchukuoane were wounded and three railway cars destroyed by Soviet raiders today in the third attack within a week on that important railhead, 125 miles from the Outer Mongolia border. Similar attacks were made last Monday and Thursday.

Seven Soviet planes yesterday raided Furorujt, rail center 40 miles suoth of Tsitsihar on the government-owned Harbin-Hailar line.

By the Associated Press

Moscow, July 17.—The Soviet Russian official news agency tonight declared a Japanese demand in "ultimatum form" regarding the rights of Japanese oil and coal concessionaires on Sakhalin Island had been rejected without consideration.

A communique by the news agency, Tass, said S. A. Lozovsky, vice commissar of foreign affairs, today returned a note handed him Sunday by the Japanese Ambassador, Shigenori Togo, "pointing out that since the document sent by the Ambassador contains threats and is in the nature of an ultimatum, the peoples commissariat of foreign affairs deems it impossible to accept it and returns it without consideration."

The announcement said the Japanese Ambassador's note "raised questions connected with the unlawful activities of Japanese oil and coal concessions on Sakhalin Island, and also contested known decisions of Soviet courts concerning unlawful actions of Japanese concession owners on Sakhalin Island."

"In conclusion," said the statement, "the Japanese Ambassador demanded in this document in ultimatum form that an answer to the questions be raised be given not later than July 18 (Tuesday)."

Sakhalin, off the Siberian coast, is part Japanese and part Russian.

Old Cause of Dispute

Fishing rights and oil and coal concessions exploited by the Japanese in the Russian half of the island long have been the cause of disputes.

Sakhalin was occupied by Japan in the Russo-Japanese war in 1904. She received half the island at the end of the war, but in 1920 after the Bolshevik Revolution occupied Russia's half. Eventually she withdrew.

Poles Joyfully Greet British Army Envoy

Visit of Gen. Ironside Hailed as Answer to England's Sincerity

By the Associated Press

Warsaw, July 17.—Poland gave an enthusiastic reception tonight to Maj. Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, inspector general of British overseas forces, who came to confer with military leaders on co-ordinating Poland's military strength with that of Britain and France.

Reports that Gen. Maurice Gustave Gamelin, commander in chief of France's armed forces, also might visit Warsaw intensified Poland's hope for translation of the Polish alliance with the two western powers into clear fact and action on the military side.

The greeting accorded Gen. Ironside when he landed at Warsaw Airdrome after a speedy flight from London echoed jubilation expressed in the Polish press and among the Polish people generally.

In the Polish opinion, the visit of the giant British officer—he stands 6 feet 4 inches and weighs 252 pounds—answered any German belief that Britain lacked sincerity in her pledge to fight for Poland's independence.

Nazis Attack Visit

(Gen. Ironside's visit aroused great interest among Nazis. The Berlin newspaper Nachtausgabe said the trip showed Germany's foreign policy "is justified in every single point. . . . The English play is now completely clear — Chamberlain gives Poland to a large extent the right to provoke a world war.")

Gen. Ironside is expected to discuss with Polish leaders the best available routes by which munitions and supplies might be shipped into Poland.

In this connection the proposed three-power mutual assistance agreement sought by Britain and France with Soviet Russia has significance for Poland since Russia represents the most immediately available source of supply for Poland.

The friendship of Moscow also has significance regarding the transport of military equipment and supplies to Poland from the Black Sea over Soviet territory. It is regarded highly unlikely that in the event of war with Germany Britain could force supplies through the Baltic to reach Poland.

(In Moscow the protracted negotiations were described as "fundamentally unchanged" after a discussion today that lasted nearly two hours.)

Poland on War Footing

From a military view the distinguished Briton had an interesting field for study in Poland. He came to a country which has had an estimated 750,000 men mobilized for war for almost four months; a country which has maintained herself on a war footing for that length of time; and one which is declared ready—as far as she can be—for all emergencies.

Polish munitions and airplane factories are working overtime. The whole machinery of war preparedness is at a high pitch.

Poland's intensive military precautions were given impetus by Nazi demands—and Poland's refusal—for the return of the Free City of Danzig and a sovereign right-of-way across Pomorze, the Polish corridor.

German Trucks Slip Into Danzig

Mediation Rumors Persist

Berlin, July 17 (INS).—It was persistently reported today that some form of "mediation" is progressing between Germany and Britain regarding Danzig.

No direct contact was believed established between Germany and Poland—opponents in the Danzig dispute—nor was there any reliable indication as to the identity of the "mediator."

(In London a government spokesman denied that Britain was participating in any attempt to mediate the Danzig dispute. Fascist officials in Rome said they had no confirmation of the report.

(In London diplomatic circles it was suggested that the Berlin reports of Danzig mediation might have been "planted" by Nazis in an attempt to undermine Polish confidence in Britain.

(Late editions of Rome newspapers printed inconspicuously and without comment a Berlin report that the Danzig question might be negotiated.)

Nazi-Polish Pact Rumored

London, July 17 (INS).—The Exchange Telegraph Agency in a dispatch from Rome tonight said it was rumored in Italian circles that Germany and Poland have reached an agreement on the Danzig problem.

An independent check failed to disclose any responsible quarter either in London or Berlin that would lend itself to such reports.

20,000 Nazis Cross Corridor

Berlin, July 17 (INS).—The German government admitted for the first time today the transfer of large bodies of German men to East Prussia.

An official announcement stated: "Due to the labor shortage and the absence of Polish farm hands from the region, 20,000 men of the German Labor Service have been dispatched to East Prussia to assist in the gathering of the harvest."

This announcement left the inference that Polish farm workers who have in past years gone to the East Prussian fields for the harvest season were not permitted to leave Poland this year, evidently because most of them have been mustered into the army.

300 Reliefers Here Find Less in Checks

New $48 Limit Cuts Some Up to $12; Artists May Have to Clerk

More than 300 direct relief clients yesterday found their checks lower, in some cases as much as $12, than they expected, while artists, writers and musicians on District WPA rolls faced the prospect of doing clerical work next month.

Paul L. Kirby, acting director of public welfare, said checks for District relief clients were made out according to the new relief law which limits public assistance to $48 for one family. Though the District received $900,000 for direct relief after the Senate approved a $1,500,000 appropriation, $12 was lopped from the $60 maximum.

Projects Need Sponsors

The plight of artists, writers and musicians, according to Ross Haworth, assistant WPA administrator, is due to lack of tax-supported institutions who'll pay 25 per cent of operating costs. Unless this sponsorship is forthcoming by July 31, he said, men and women working under arts and writers projects must be transferred to WPA office jobs.

Sponsorship for the art project would amount to $12,750, according to Richard Kenah, its local director. At the present time, the estimated sponsorship of the music project, is $15,300, according to Robert Merchant, music supervisor. In a statement made by John E. Poole, the sponsor's 25 per cent contribution to the writers' project would total $6,806.

The Library of Congress and the National Archives, in a report made by Bessie F. Cary, director of the historical records survey, have promised to take care of 74 persons employed in that division. Of these, 53 are at the Library and 21 at Archives.

More Administrative Help

Direct relief in Washington, Kirby pointed out, may benefit by a new provision in the law which permits 10 per cent of the $900,000 to be spent for administration. He said additional case workers and clerks will be selected as soon as possible and the entire relief load rechecked in order to speed social security benefits to those entitled to them.

Otto J. Cass, no whead of the Public Assistance Division, said his office had received 50 personal and 150 telephone calls in regard to the relief check cuts.

Reorganization Killed for Session

the Commissioner before Congress adjourns.

A clash between Everett and Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal preceded sub-committee adoption of the Nichols motion to defer action.

Seal, a member of the "kitchen cabinet" which has been studying the Kennedy bill for the past few days, charged drafters of the legislation with attempting to "camouflage" their real purpose and of attempting to set up a one-man government.

He said the set-up of a commission and a city manager is inconsistent and that the result would be that the president of the board would be a glorified secretary."

Everett, bristling with anger, said he was "amazed" at such an interpretation of the bill and declared it unfounded.

"To say the Commissioners would be subordinate to the administrator is absurd," he said.

All the best thought on government nowadays, he said, agrees that the same agency should not determine policies and administer them also.

After Seal had criticized the enumeration of more than two score specific powers that would be turned over by Congress to the Commissioners, Everett retorted that he was "surprised at Mr. Seal's comments as the provisions are, with a little editing, his own proposals."

Everett said Seal had the specific enumeration of the Commissioners' power although the corporation counsel previously had stated he considered such a listing to be "inadvisable."

Seal did not answer Everett's chargee, but he told the sub-committee he considered it dangerous to upset court decisions that have approved powers of the Commissioners over the last 50 years.

He added that "all but four or five" of the powers enumerated in the Kennedy bill already are possessed by the District heads.

Several members of the sub-committee sprang to the defense of District officials after Everett had commented that "the so-called 'kitchen cabinet' is trying to pick as many flaws as possible in the plan."

"They see ghosts in every corner," he added with a note of sarcasm.

"Who is in a better position to detect the flaws?" chimed in Bates as Nichols and Dirksen murmured a defense of the "kitchen cabinet."

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen urged the sub-committee to take more time and pointed out that District officials have many amendments to offer.

"This is a vital bill to the District," he said, "and we don't want to make any mistakes."

Nichols, in offering his motion, said he might agree fully with the Griffenhagen proposals but that the sub-committee needed more time to consider them.

"This thing shouldn't be done hastily," he said. "We ought to proceed cautiously and slowly."

Nichols suggested that some persons ought to be directed to make a further study of the reorganization plans during the recess of Congress.

Dirksen warned the chairman that if the bill were pushed at this session it probably would not receive hospitable treatment in the House.

"Recent actions of the House, coupled with the fact that adjournment is in the air and many members are already making plans to go home, indicate we would have trouble even if the bill were reported by this sub-committee.

"We would be up against roll calls, quorum calls, et cetera," he added.

Kennedy pointed out that the Griffenhagen plan had been submitted to Congress in February and that the Commissioners had been asked for criticism months ago.

"Now I don't know whether the Commissioners are in favor of any reorganization or not," he said.

"Before we act on the details of any reorganization bill," interjected Dirksen, "we've got to determine what kind of a government Congress is going to give the District. I don't agree with the first five articles of this bill."

Schulte's action in forcing an adjournment of the full District Committee brought a protest from Representative Seccombe (Republican), of Ohio.

After pointing out that the committee frequently transacts business with less than a quorum present, he asked Schulte the meaning of his move.

"You know the tactics used on my milk bill," Schulte replied.

"Well, if that's going to be the attitude, this is going to be my last meeting."

Four other committee members appeared a few minutes after the session was adjourned by Representative Kennedy, acting in the absence of Chairman Randolph, who was out of the city. Eight out of 21 were present when Schulte raised the point of order.

More than a dozen citizens who were present to testify on pending bills left the District Committee room complaining of the action.

Among measure left dormant by failure of the committee to act were the milk bill, the measure to revise the lunacy proceedings law and a bill to extend and make permanent parking meters.

As no other meeting is scheduled before next District day, the billls are likely to lie over until next session.

Schulte stated, however, that he would try to get House approval of his milk bill, despite the fact that a point of order against it is expected to be sustained. This action, he said, would strike out the new language incorporating the United States Public Health Service code, and would resore his original bill to throw open the Washington milkshed without that curb.

Girl Writes D. C. Sweetheart And Fortune Smiles on Them

Rita Mangini really thought she was in the "world of tomorrow" when Ray Perkins, radio star, awarded her the cash prizes at the New York World's Fair

Prize Winning Letter From N. Y. Fair Makes Their World of Tomorrow Brighter With Cash, And He Confides They'll Marry in October

Two childhood sweethearts from New York's East Side soon will be married and live in Washington, aided by the money they will receive for a letter the girl wrote the boy.

The girl, Rita Mangini, wrote the boy, Al Campo, 3212 Walbridge place northwest, from the New York Worlds' Fair and her letter was one of the four best of the thousands entered in the Westinghouse Electric Co.'s "letter home" contest last week. Both will receive cash awards.

Al has been in Washington for three years running a sorting machine in the General Accounting Office of the United States Government. Rita has been working part-time for an office equipment firm in New York City. They will be married about the middle of October, Al says, and they hope to live in Greenbelt, Md.

In her letter, Rita said, "If my letter is chosen as an interesting one, I'll be able to come to Washington to pay you a visit." So the boy hopes to se the girl soon.

They met about eight years ago while both were going to high school in New York City where they lived about three blocks apart on the East Side. They decided to get married about two months ago.

Rita's letter follows:

"I never before believed in anybody's ability to see into the future, but now I do. For the past four hours I have been wandering about in something which can only be compared to a crystal ball. I have been looking at the world of tomorrow and I am certain I shall be very much satisfied with our way of living in years to come. I can picture our white streamlines, air-conditioned house with a hangar in the rear for your autogyro; I shall have an electro-man to now the lawn, paint the fence and perhaps I'll teach him to drive the car. I won't have any dishwashing or furnaces to trouble about. But what bothers me is what will I do with all my leisure time.

"I think I had better step back into 1939 and tell you that I'm at the Fair. I'm writing this at the Westinghouse exhibit. If my letter is chosen as an interesting one, I'll be able to come to Washington to pay you a visit—I'll close now as I want some time to find out what the man of tomorrow will wear.

"Love, "RITA."

Further developments reported by Cooksey yesterday:

Roosevelt Favors Pact, Poland Says

By International News Service.

Reports in the Warsaw press that Soviet Ambassador Qumansky was carrying to Joseph Stalin, a message from President Roosevelt, expressing hope than an Anglo-French-Soviet military alliance would be consummated was received with surprise and no confirmation in official circles here last night.

At both—the State Department and White House, officials were inclined to raise a skeptical eyebrow. Their attitude was that the report and the source from which it came were not worthy of being dignified by a formal denial.

Five Hurt in Fire At Church School

New York, July 17 (U.P.).—Five firemen were overcome by smoke tonight fighting a $100,000 blaze which destroyed the Sacred Heart Parochial School, in Brooklyn.

The fire for a time threatened the church itself, the rectory and the convent. Smoke which spread over midtown Manhattan drew thousands of spectators.

5 Aides of Huey Long Indicted By U. S. Jury in Mail Fraud

Department of Justice in Washington said they contemplated no immediate trip.

Two United States marshals took Smith and Adams into custody in Baton Rouge and escorted them to New Orleans for arraignment on the Federal charges. District Attorney Dewey Sanchez said Smith would be returned to the Baton Rouge jail, where he has been held in default of $50,000 bail on parish indictments.

Shortly before Federal authority struck at the very top of the political organization built by the late Huey P. Long, a State grand jury in Baton Rouge heard another of the "Kingfish's" closest lieutenants, former Gov. Richard Leche, tell of the university scandal brought to light by Smith's resignation three weeks ago. Leche resigned a day later, giving ill health as the reason.

Told of the Weiss incident just after he left the grand jury room, Leche smiled and said:

"Business is picking up."

"I have nothing to say," was Weiss' reply to newsmen's questions.

The Baton Rouge grand jury already has indicted eight persons, including Smith, Adams and Dr. Clarence Lorio, another leading State politician, charging embezzlement of university materials and funds.

The Federal indictment charged Weiss and the others split most of $75,000 obtained from the university through a double sale of equipment of the hotel, purchased to be used as a nurses' home for the university medical center in New Orleans.

The indictment said Hart received the full $75,000 which was paid to the National Equipment Co., Inc., controlled by Hart, and that he subsequently paid over or caused to be paid over $14,000 to Smith, $11,000 to Adams, $16,500 to Weiss, $8,500 to Lesage and kept $19,066.01 himself.

The indictment alleged Hart, Weiss and Adams negotiated with Smith for purchase by the university of the hotel equipment for $75,000 although they "well knew that all of the equipment, fixtures and other contents of said Bienville Hotel . . . were included . . . in the sale price of $575,000 for said hotel . . ."

SEYMOUR WEISS
"I Have Nothing to Say"

"All the defendants well knew that the said Louisiana State University would not and did not receive in return for said payment of $75,000 any consideration or any other thing of value whatsoever," the indictment stated.

One charge of using the mails to defraud was based on the assertion the defendants on October 28, 1936, forwarded the $75,000 check from New Orleans to Baton Rouge for payment by the City National Bank there.

The second count alleged the defendants further used the mails to deposit the money received from the University in the New Orleans branch of the Federal Reserve Bank.

John Rogge, United States Assistant Attorney General in charge of the criminal division of the Department of Justice, handed out the indictments after the court received them from the grand jury.

Income Tax Bureau agents immediately called in Weiss and Lesage for questioning. Frank Lohn, agent in charge of the Internal Revenue unit here, said he had also questioned Hart, and "quite a few others."

"I'm sorry I can't tell you just what we talked about, because it would make awfully good reading," Lohn said.

Weiss only last January paid the Federal Government $38,746.10 on back income taxes covering the years 1929 to 1933 after indictments alleging income tax evasion and conspiracy were dropped by the Government.

A New Honor Comes to Variety Club Showmen

Win First Place in Nation for Charitable Work; Loew's Makes Changes in Local Bookings; This, That and the Other About the Theater

A NEW HONOR, recently bestowed upon the Washington Variety Club, Tent, No. 11, in the national organization, will be formally signalized at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel on Monday, July 31, at 1 o'clock.

On that occasion, John H. Harris, of Pittsburgh, Pa., national chief barker, will present to the local club the silver plaque voted it at Variety's national convention held not so long ago in Detroit, Mich. This recognition of the Washington Variety Club is significant. The award of the silver plaque to Washington was made in recognition of the local showmen's organization as the one in the country that had made the most efficient and most useful disposition of its welfare fund in all manner of charitable enterprises. There are, or were the last I knew, 19 Tents in the chain of Variety Clubs across the country. Washington stands first for helpful relief work.

BELL

It will be recalled that among the local Variety Club's benefactions have been free motion picture entertainment for the shut-ins and inmates of all of the District's eleemosynary institutions; the purchase of a fully equipped ambulance for Emergency Hospital; the recent installation of incubator units in Sibley Hospital, to reduce the mortality rate among prematurely born babies, and a large number of lesser charities, administered by Rudolph Berger, chairman of the welfare committee of the club.

Under the chief barkership of A. E. Litchman, prominent chain theater owner, plans now are under way for a softball game between Lowell Thomas' "Nine Old Men" and the team representing the press that recently defeated the Congressional team in Griffith Stadium. The proceeds of this sporting event will be devoted to the club's welfare fund for further charitable purposes.

It is not surprising that Tent No. 11 should have walked off with the national award for the most far-reaching charitable work when it is taken into consideration that the showmen of the National Capital, through this outlet, disburse approximately $10,000 a year for the amelioration of poverty, distress and human suffering.

Chief Barker Litchman has graciously invited this desk to be his guest at the luncheon on July 31—an invitation which we accept with alacrity, avidity, voracity and deep gratitude for the remembrance.

Comes a wire from C. N. Odell, of the New York home office of Paramount, stating that he will arrive in Washington on Thursday with a print of William A. Wellman's new production of "Beau Geste," which has Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy and Susan Hayward in the top roles. Manager J. E. Fontaine, of the local Paramount Film Exchange, has arranged a preview of the picture in the Archives Building on Thursday evening at 8:30. It is a source of regret that both the day and the hour are impossible for this desk in any week. Particularly sorry to miss this one, because when he was on that "Union Pacific Special" Brian Donlevy told me so much about it. It was in the making of this picture that a duelling scene with Ray Milland put him in the hospital for several days. If "Beau Geste" is that realistic all of the way, it ought to be good. It ought to be good, even if it isn't, with that cast.

So they broke all attendance records in the history of the organization at the Roadside Theater last Saturday night. It was a close squak there for a time, with the previous record only tied with 29 standees. Then a lady presented herself at the box-office and only wished to go inside for the entr'acte number—making 30 standees and the new record. And then, on top of that, Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the Olney Theater, popped up with Kitty Carlisle, star of this week's "Tonight or Never" in tow, and that made it certain. Only there was no place to put the visiting star and impresario but backstage—which is where they went, to the great edification and excitement of the troupe.

Those Marx Brothers must have something. Their ancient screen production of "Animal Crackers" caught on so emphatically during its first week that it is being held over for a second at the Little Theater. This one dates back so far—to 1930 or thereabouts, I think it is—that all four of the mad Marxes are in it. They are now only three.

Speaking of Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran, of the Olney, it was he, you will recall—or maybe not—who discovered unusual talents in little Peggy Ann Garner, when she was a juvenile enrollee in his National Academy of Dramatic Arts, and was sure she possessed endowments that the motion pictures could use to advantage. The old Panjandrum proved to be right.

Peggy Ann already has been seen in some important film assignments, but perhaps none so impressive as her casting with Cary Grant, Carole Lombard and Kay Francis in "Memory of Love," booked, so I understand, for the RKO-Keith screen later in the summer. Might be worth watching for.

Dan Terrell, of the Warner publicity department—the lucky so-and-so—reports by short-wave that he is vacationing for a fortnight, the first half of which, at least, will be devoted to estimating the box-office appeal of surf, sand and sun at Bethany Beach, Del., his favorite swimmin' hole.

And there comes now to hand by frothy courier a copy of the Atlantic City Daily World, with two screaming banner lines across the top announcing that "Nelson Bell Will Attend 'On Borrowed Time' Screening." Bet Atlantic City got a terrific bang out of that, although I seem to detect the fine Italian hand of Publicist Ray Bell—no relation—in the whole tintinnabulary business.

The preview screening of "On Borrowed Time," incidentally, is today at 1:30, but it will not open Thursday at the Palace, as heretofore announced. It will open, instead, at Loew's Capitol on Friday, with strong likelihood of a third week fr "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," at the Palace. So now you know.

Stop-the-Presses Note

AMON CARTER, the Fort Worth publisher who made a round-trip Clipper flight last week just to spend one day to Paris, Friday met Eero Jarnefelt, Finland's Minister to America . . . Carter discussed the foreign situation and then commented upon events in American history. Jarnefelt asked the publisher to tell him something of American history—and Carter began: "Now take my State, Texas. On December 29, 1845, Texas was admitted to the Union, and then" . . . "One moment, please," the Finnish Minister interrupted, "WHAT Union?"

ALTHOUGH PAUL V. McNutt had called out the troops during the Terre Haute strikes, John L. Lewis has confided that of all the Democratic hopefuls, McNutt seemed to be the most promising and would receive labor's support. . . . One of the Broadway night clubs which received the most flowery praise from the critics is being offered for immediate sale. . . . Elliott Bell, the N. Y. Times' financial writer who resigned recently, will become associated with Thomas E. Dewey as part of the Brain Trust he's preparing for 1940. Bell's job will be that of Economics Adviser.

AT THE Hampshire House apartment of Felix Ferry, a group of guests were offering suggestions regarding the safety of a trip to Europe, under the present conditions . . . "It's terrible, traveling during a war scare," Camela Aduwa stated. "Last September I traveled on the Europa, when it suddenly was recalled to Germany. And then I went on the boat train to Berlin. I want to assure you people—all of us were trembling with fright. You don't know what fear is unless you've gone through an experience like that." . . . "Yes, we don't know what fear is," another guest added . . . He was Rene Belbenoit, author of "Dry Guillotine," who in that book confessed that he participated in a cannibal feast during his escape from Devil's Island.

GENE FOWLER has retired to Fire Island, through whose streets he walks in his bare feet. . . . His newest book will be completed this week. . . . Orson Welles took his Mercury Theater associates to Hollywood when he left yesterday. . . . Crown Prince Philip of Greece, who now is in the British Navy, wrote to friends here that the British Government won't permit him to travel anywhere in Europe now, except to Holland, Belgium and the North of France. . . . Cobina Wright signed a movie contract for her daughter, Cobina Wright, jr., and then—when an astrologer told her the stars weren't right yet—placed the contracts into a vault, pending the astral correction.

MR. AND MRS. James Durbin, parents of Deanna Durbin, sailed on the Normandie Wednesday . . . They cornered the Universal press agent, who was their guide, and told him: "Remember, when we were at the Riviera, a news cameraman took our picture? See that we get a copy." . . . "Of course," the publicist agreed. "But why do you want it?" . . . "We want it to send back to the folks in Winnipeg," explained the parents of the young screen star who just signed a $1,000,000 contract, "to show 'em we've risen in the world."

GLENN MILLER, the band leader who was unknown six months ago, will get $12,000 for a two-week engagement at the Paramount Theater here. . . . The Federal officials hope to effect the release of Albert N. Chaperau within a few weeks, because of the assistance he rendered in the prosecution of Judge Manton. . . . James Noonan, the upstate lawyer who defended Manton, has vowed that he'll never try another case in the Big City. . . . Friday night's decision by the 4 A's against the Amer. Fed. of Actors relieved a complicated situation at the Intl. Casino. Until Friday the AFA had insisted upon a bond by the night club's owners, who refused to comply.

FEET EDSON, one of the colorful gentry who flourished on Broadway during the prohibition era, now is serving a six-month jail sentence for selling liquor without a license . . . Feet worked for Texas Guinan but was banned from those extra-territorial excursions which always were profitable . . . A distinguished Bostonian named Scott once invited the entire Guinan crew to join him in a week-end at Atlantic City and promised to spend $8,000 for the trip. Edson was distraught when he learned that the invitation didn't include him and that he couldn't participate in the haul . . . But the undaunted Feet was resourceful. And when, on the train, Scott ordered champagne he didn't notice that the man who served him the $25-a-bottle celery tonic was Feet Edson—the only Caucasian who ever wore a porter's cap on the Penn. R. R.

THE DAUGHTER of Edgar Luckenbach—the steamship magnate who objected to her marrying a commoner—now has the perfect answer to her sire's objection. The story will break shortly. . . . Louis Bromfield will complete his Hollywood chores this week and will retire to his Ohio farm. . . . Because the Charlie McCarthy Day at the World's Fair improved the attendance, other notables of the entertainment business will be accorded such honors. George M. Cohan will be tendered a Song-and-Dance Night, Irving Berlin a Tin-Pan-Alley Night, etc.

ONE OF THE Louisiana political leaders who made no profit from the financial activities of Dr. James Monroe Smith, the indicted president of Louisiana State University, was very worried this week—worried that he might become involved in that mess . . . "But if you got no dough out of it," he was consoled, "there's nothing to worry about" . . . "I still may become involved," he sighed. "I'm wracking my memory to see how I possibly could be linked to Dr. Smith. Maybe a few years ago I may have called him and said: 'There's a friend of mine who is a very lovable chap and who never went to school. Be a nice guy, Doc, and see that he gets a diploma.'"

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

By Errol Flynn.
(Batting for Hedda Hopper)

When I'm asked to do a guest column, Hedda, that's when I'm glad I'm an actor. (A lot of people disagree on that actor business, but I belong to the Actors' Guild.) Anyhow, one job like this makes me happy I don't have to turn in a similar chore daily. I haven't the faintest idea where to begin. Heaven only knows what I'd do if I had to turn one out 365 days a year.

Fully twenty minutes have gone since I completed above paragraph and here I sit, gazing at the walls of my den. Can't even get an inspiration from my fishing trophies or a glance at the garden. Do you suppose the weather has anything to do with it? Is it because there's so little romance in a stuffed fish?

There's a model of my boat, the Sirocco, on the mantel. What a day for a sail, Hedda. I'd even take you along, if you'd let me off this chore. Glance out the window tells me it's bright, warm. My, the trees are bending in the wind. We could be across to Catalina in less than three hours. Then a swim in the crystal water of Emerald Bay, up north of the Isthmus; a fast spin on water skis, maybe a try for a marlin in the late afternoon. And back in time for dinner tonight.

Maybe you'd just better put my name at the head of your column . . . then leave the column blank. It would certainly express my feelings today.. Think we could get away with it? No, I suppose not. Anyhow, I can't go to Catalina. The telephone is liable to ring any minute and I'll be wanted on the "Elizabeth and Essex" set to give my all for dear old Warner Bros. I'm "on call" today, and you know what that means. No work but you have to keep yourself available.

That's the trouble with our business, Hedda. They should eliminate "on call" days, when the sun is shining in a manner which excels boasts of the Chamber of Commerce. Sky is blue, the wind is just right for a sail to Catalina.

But there I go, complaining about the movie business, when I've just told you what I thought of the columning business. I shouldn't complain, but it's criminal to have to sit around the house, even a nice house, on a day like this, giving the phone a dirty look every time it rings and wondering whether you're going back to work or not!

Wonder if I dare dash out to the airport for a quick spin in the new plane? There's a picture of her on the wall, too. She's a sweet little ship and I've got my pilot's license, so I can take her up alone. It wouldn't take long—half an hour there, an hour up in the air, another half hour back to the house. If the studio did call Max could tell them I'd run up to the drug store or something. Then I could alibi that I'd gotten a flat tire. But no, I'd better not take a chance. Oh, I forgot I have a column to fill.

Then there's a picture of my black stallion. Just got him. He's a magnificent animal. Fiery disposition, fast. And only ten minutes distance from the house. I could sneak up there, give him a bit of exercise. That wouldn't take long. Ten minutes up, ditto back, an hour's ride. An hour and twenty minutes all told and the flat tire alibi would work. Or would it? It's really an ancient excuse, isn't it? I'd feel self-conscious if I tried it.

Of course, I could go out to the West Side Club and play a couple of sets of tennis. The studio can always reach me there. But somehow tennis doesn't hold its ordinary appeal today. It would seem more like work than play and today just doesn't seem to be a day of work.

I know what I'll do. Just sort of ease myself out to the screened patio off the living room and catch a little private nap.

P.S. I thought the column was completed, but it wasn't. Just as I expected, the phone rang. It was the studio and I've got to put on the trappings of Essex. Imagine tights—when all I want is a tight breeze! Positively criminal, says I, to drag a man away from the contemplation of his pleasures and a bit of much-needed rest for a mere trifle of work.

Kitty Carlisle Charms Olney First-Nighters

Heads Well-Balanced Cast in Belasco's 'Tonight or Never'

By Nelson B. Bell

With the handsome and versatile Kitty Carlisle, brilliant luminary of both stage and screen, as guest star, the Olney Theater Players last evening presented the most finished and most expert performance of their summer season, in David Belasco's three-act comedy of "Tonight or Never." The members of the cast were judiciously assigned, letter-perfect in their parts and continuously in the spirit of a light evening's entertainment that was evenly directed by John Hayden and effectively staged in two appropriate settings by Charles Squires.

The story of this amiable excursion into the field of grand opera and the "seductive" adventures of a young prima donna with a glorious voice, who still was unable to impart to her roles the warm emotional impulses that spring from wordly experience, and set about remedying that deficiency with the aid of a mysterious young stranger, is known to Washington both from its stage and screen expositions. It was enacted again last night at the Olney with a professional polish that kept its three acts moving at a brisk pace, even during the periods of sustained dialogue and subdued action.

A "Triple-Threat" Star

Miss Carlisle not only portrayed and costumed her stellar role in a manner that would have done credit to Broadway, but added further charm to her performance by singing several arias from favorite operas and the "Play, Gypsy" ballad that serves as the theme song of the play and bears a direct relation to its development. Her numbers sung in superb voice and were enthusiastically applauded. Each act was paid the tribute of similar audience tumult in appreciation of a splendid interpretation of a well-written and amusing comedy-drama.

The seven supporting players all came in for their full meed of favor. Freddie Sherman, as accompanist and "faithful dog" of the prima donna, here has his best role to date and proved himself as able a character actor as he is comedian. William Bishop read the lines of "The Unknown Gentleman" less perfunctorily than he acted the part and proved a satisfactory effective foil for Miss Carlisle's coquetry and guest of those qualities of womanhood and artistry lacking from her ingenuous nature. As the gay Marquesa, a retired veteran of the operatic stage, with a lively surviving interest in her promiscuously romantic past, Mabel Paige demonstrated further why she has leaped into a place of quick popularity with local audiences. Frank McNellis, as The Nobleman, added still further to the excellent balance of the most proficient ensemble the Olney so far has assembled. Minor roles were adequately played by Jeanette Chinley, Allan Sweyer and Henry Midgeley.

"Tonight or Never," as presented by Miss Carlisle and her associates, is real theater. It should enlist the keen interest of every playgoer with any regard for the better things of the lighter stage.

Cross Roads

Right in the middle of the clover patch is the Cross Roads' latest, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Well cast, speedily directed and generously mixed with laughs and screams, the George M. Cohan mystery-comedy last night opened its two weeks' run before an enthusiastic and nearly filled hayloft.

With this Cohanesque narration of strange doings in the inn atop Baldpate Mountain, the Cross Roads Players shun the strictly comic for the first time this season. While the play dates back to 1913, it might well have been written for contemporary consumption. The Cohan flavor sparkles with streamlined zest throughout these adventures of a novelist who locked himself up in the mountaintop inn, in the bite of winter, to concoct a money-making yarn.

Edmund J. Evans played the knowing novelist smoothly, with a nicety of humor and tongue-in-the-cheek disbelief so characteristic of the author and necessary to the role. Substituting on brief notice for the ailing Ruth May, Peggy Mansfield was splendid in the brief, but mood-setting (or, in a barn theater, is it "moo" setting?) character of the caretaker's superstitious wife. Robert Coran, too, was fine as the snaky Lou Max, on whom a slinky flesh-mate had placed her triple-cross.

To the bleak and snow-bound summer resort, you may recall, there is more than one "single key in existence." The bleary hermit, who fancies himself as a ghost, is only one of a group that includes a railway president, a crooked mayor and a bright newspaperwoman. An O. Henry denouement is what remains for you to discover.

The minor roles are uncommonly well played with George Hall's woman-hating hermit and Dorothy O'Donnell's cool-headed reporter outstanding. Neil Linger's setting is clever and Howard Wentworth's direction rapidly paced.

Ted Field, Charles McLendon, Sydney Bassler, Doyle Tripp, Benton Henderson, Mr. Linger, Fred Draper, Helen Todd and Nancy Hutchison (fine as the triple-crosser) completed the cast.

LOUELLA PARSONS

Now you are asking about Bette Davis? Well, Bette isn't happy-go-lucky and she cannot do all the movies lined up for her, so there is naturally an aquarius on her part. Of course, Miriam plays the school teacher who marries Henry Fonda, the minister and inventor of the cable, and you'll see George Brent in this role with Edmund Goulding directing.

The whole country read with amusement last week the article stating that Otto Kahn's million-dollar country place is now occupied by the street cleaners of New York. New York has taken it over as a recreation center and the show place where the Prince of Wales and other notables were entertained when Otto Kahn was in his prime as one of America's greatest patrons of art is now filled with white wings. That news item was just too much for Darryl Zanuck, who immediately commissioned two writers to go to work and prepare a story to be called "White Wings in Clover." It ought to be a really funny comedy.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: That wasn't Charlie Chaplin who was strolling along the avenue in a derby hat, cane and moustache. It was only an imitator, probably hoping for publicity. Abe Roth is devoting his attention to Judy Malcolm, once the favorite heartbeat of Milton Berle; so many [illegible] Monday. Jane Wyman, Henry Wilcoxon, Jane Wyatt within the movies, Frances Gifford, Oklahoma's veteran cowboy and well known screen Buffalo Bill, was the small boy's hero, is in town.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

CAA Grounds 3 Civil Pilots As 'Show-Offs'

8 Others Are Fined ToStop 'Monkeyshining' And Keep Record Clean

The licenses of three pilots have been suspended for stunting at low altitudes, and seven others and an airport manager have been fined for other violations of civil air regulations, Chairman Robert V. Hinckley, of the CAA, announced yesterday.

"Civil aviation is becoming too important a factor in national recovery and national defense to permit monkeyshining to mar the fine safety records of thousands of good pilots," Hinckley declared.

Bear Down on Show-Offs

"All field personnel have been instructed to bear down hard on show-offs. We are doing all we can to teach safe flying. We are going to do everything we can to stop the other kind."

No dates for hearings have been set in the cases of Stanley Woodward, of Kingsland, Ga.; Robert J. Sinclair, of Sutcliff, Nev., and John Funk, of Tulsa, Okla., whose certificates were suspended.

The action was taken after investigators found that Woodward had been performing acrobatics near the ground while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, but had landed without damaging his plane. Sinclair's license was suspended after he hit a pump in a gasoline station and demolished his plane while stunting at less than 50 feet. Both men, who held private flying certificates, escaped injury.

Four in Stunting Plane

Funk, holder of an instructor's rating as well as a commercial certificate, stunted at a low altitude over the municipal airport at Tulsa, Okla., with three passengers in his plane.

"His action not only endangered himself and the occupants of his airplane, but the transport planes and other commercial traffic regularly using this airport," it was said.

Fines were levied on J. P. Casparis, operator of the Hampton Airport, Dallas, Tex., for permitting J. W. Burden, whose student's certificate had expired, to fly an uncertified plane from the terminal; Paul Fritsche, of Pittstown, N. J.; Cletus J. Hallquist, of Red Wing, Minn.; Chanseler R. Holmes, of Alamede, Calif., and Fred D. Toogood, of Anchorage, Alaska, for stunting at low altitudes, over congested areas, on civil airways and in control zones; Harvey W. Hedlund, of Chicago, Ill., and Charles L. McKee, of Wichita, Kans., for carrying passengers without authorization and Stafford A. Short, of East Boston, Mass., for subjecting his passengers and plane to unnecessary hazard by disregarding weather information.

Ex-Police Chief's Son Wins DrunkDrivingCase

Trial Judge James C. Christopher at Bethesda, Md., yesterday dismissed charges of driving while under the influence of liquor filed against Charles L. Cooley, of Bethesda, son of a former county chief of police.

County Policeman R. L. Dutrow and E. R. Jones testified that they were called to an accident involving Cooley's car and one operated by Russell H. Clarvoe, of Washington, but that they did not see Cooley driving.

Daughter Gets Most of Shepard Estate Worth More Than $670,000

More than $1,000,000 was bequeather in two wills filed in District Court yesterday for probate.

Mrs. Emma Yvonne Cosby, 2025 Q street northwest, received nearly all of the $670,000 estate of her mother, Mrs. Emma Schenck Shepard, who died here June 30. Mrs. Shepard was 84 and lived at 2027 Massachusetts avenue northwest. She was the widow of Dr. Charles R. Shepard.

Mrs. Shepard left bonds and other securities totaling $620,000 and the Massachusetts avenue home, which was valued at $48,300.

Mrs. Shepard gave $10,000 to her son-in-law, Col. Spencer Cosby, retired Army officer, who was military aide to Presidents Taft and Wilson, after having been a District Commissioner in 1908.

The will of Charles Schafer, 3324 Eighteenth street northwest, who died July 2, distributed an estate of $364,000 to his wife, children and charities. Mr. Schafer gave $500 each to St. John's Lutheran Church, German Orphan Asylum, Washington City Orphan Asylum, Rupert Home, Almas Temple for the fund of Shriners Hospital for Crippled Children, Garfield Hospital, National Lutheran Home for Aged, Masonic and Eastern Star Home and Salvation Army.

Post Carrier Boys Marooned Half Way Up Bank Finally Saved With Rope After Third Makes Precarious Climb to Get Help

Two Washington Post carrier boys clung for their lives to a locust tree halfway up a 125-foot cliff over the Potomac for an hour yesterday, until a third struggled to the top and came back with the Clarendon Rescue Squad.

Before he recahed the top, great stones dislodged in his climb crashed down the cliff on the pair below, all but dashing them from their precarious holds.

The three boys had started to climb the cliff on the Virginia side of the river near Chain Bridge, but when they had got about 75 feet up, two of them found they could go no farther. They were Henry Oden, 16, of 67 New York avenue northwest, and Clyde Johnson, 14, of 606 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

One dizzy glance at the rocks and water below told them they could not retreat, so the third boy, Nick Stavon, 16, of 803 Third street northwest, undertook the climb to the top.

"It was the loose dirt about half way up that stopped us," said Clyde. "I don't know how Nick managed to get to the top, but he knocked a lot of rocks down as he went that nearly fell on us and killed us.

"We weren't really afraid though, and that was the funny part about it. But we knew when Nick got to the top we'd be all right."

From the top of the cliff Stavon ran the quarter of a mile to the bridge and summoned the rescue squad. Joseph Clutter, of 1619 Thirty-third street northwest, joined Firemen Stanley Smith and Francis Bogart in rescue operations from the base of the cliff.

Climbing up to the boys' uneasy perch, they tied a rope to the tree, down which the boys slid to the ground. Neither suffered any injury.

Proper Emphasis

In supporting the stand on neutrality legislation taken by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull, Senator George W. Norris is in no sense going back on his pacifist principles. Now, as in 1917, when it took great moral courage to resist the general tide, he is wholly opposed to American involvement in any foreign war.

But, as the Senator makes clear in his statement, it is precisely because he wants to safeguard the peace of the United States that he criticizes the policy of drift favored by some of his colleagues, including a majority of one on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

As Senator Norris sees it, and millions of Americans agree with him, the danger of war, and of consequent American involvement in that war, arises from the attitude, policies and activities of certain aggressive powers. Any policy which encourages those powers in the belief that, if war comes, the United States will make no distinction between the aggressors and their victims thereby makes war more probable and increases the chances of our involvement in the conflict.

On the other hand, if the United States should reverse its present stand and permit the sale of all supplies on a cash-and-carry basis, that development, in Senator Norris' opinion, would have a strong tendency to discourage aggression. So far as the European scene is concerned, he is unquestionably correct.

The emphasis placed by Senator Norris on neutrality act revision is, therefore, on war prevention. And that is precisely where the emphasis belongs.

While D. C. Drifts

Washington is only one of many political units seeking reorganization of outworn administrative machinery. In accord with the policy adopted by Congress this year, sweeping changes in the Federal Government are being effected. Many States have also overhauled loosely organized units in the interests of economy and efficiency. And political scientists see an encouraging trend toward more effective organization of municipal regimes.

The District's efforts to modernize its government have been stimulated, in considerable measure, by the achievements of various States and cities in this field. Reorganization measures were an important part of all legislation enacted by State legislatures this year. Rhode Island completely revamped its administrative structure, with the expectation of saving $1,000,000 annually in operating expenses. Iowa passed 51 bills to consolidate State institutions and centralize their management. Minnesota created a department of administration headed by a commissioner who will be virtually a State manager. Several other States effected less sweeping changes. And these are but a sample of the centralizing trend which has been in evidence in State capitals for a number of years.

City government is undergoing similar changes. The old type of mayor-council system, in which the mayor held little executive power, has long been in disrepute. Likewise the commission form of government, which became especially popular during the decade before the World War, is now steadily losing ground. A survey made for Editorial Research Reports by Bryant Putney shows the number of commission cities dropped 11 per cent during the 20 years prior to 1936, while there was a gain of 18 per cent in council-manager systems. Forty States now permit some, and in many cases all, classes of cities to place their administrative problems in the hands of city managers.

Washington was one of the first cities to adopt the commission form of local government. For many years it served the Capital satisfactorily. Indeed, that system is still popular among relatively small cities in which the problems of municipal control are not yet complicated. But its inability to provide unified administrative control has discouraged adoption of that plan by large cities where the need for expert management is more pronounced. Likewise, only a few large cities have taken up the council-manager plan. Most of them, however, have attained some of the advantages of that system by strengthening the powers of their mayors.

Probably no one system will ever meet the requirements of all American cities. But experience in municipal control to date puts a high premium upon two reforms: the centralization of administrative control in a strong executive, and the substitution of relatively small legislative bodies for the old unwieldy type of city council.

Most cities have a great advantage over Washington in adapting these evolving types of municipal control to their developing needs. In a large number of States the municipalities have the right, under definite home-rule statutes, to choose their own type of government. Few, if any, cities have been compelled to drift for 65 years, as has Washington, without any local authority to adjust their governmental machinery to changing conditions.

Out With The Stars

As an important offset to those who deem a war in Europe probable this summer must be numbered a highly specialized but rapidly increasing class of sportsmen who feel in their bones that such a disaster is simply unthinkable. And the members of this happy group have so much intuition, for the detection of shifting winds, changing currents and developing squalls, that their conviction of a continued high in the political barometer is undeniably impressive.

These optimists are the individual members of the International Star Class Yacht Racing Association, a far-flung family in which Washington has distinguished representation. In every corner of the world, from the Chesapeake Bay to Batavia in the Dutch East Indies, from Lake Maracaibo in Venezuela to the Norwegian fiords, the starboat skippers are now looking forward to their annual regatta, to be held from August 20-27 at Kiel, Germany has the honor of being host because last year her representatives were the victors at San Diego—the first time in 26 competitions that the United States was not the winner.

With a length of only 22½ feet overall, the starboat is universally acknowledged to be the finest small racing yacht ever designed. Its towering mast and great sail area, balanced by a heavy fin-type keel, make it unusually swift, while numerous ocean performances attest its seaworthy qualities. To be recognized by the international association, starboats of every country must be identical in every important respect. It is this identity which makes the skill in construction, the care in upkeep, and above all the proficiency in handling, the supreme tests of competitive performance.

On the coastal and inland waters of the United States there are now 38 separate starboat fleets, each unit of which is registered with the national association. Among these fleets the elimination contests which determine eligibility for the international regatta are now being held. Last Saturday, at Gibson Island, Melville Grosvenor brought the Escape in first for the fourth time in five races in which 10 starboats of that club's fleet have lately been contending. So Washington becomes one of the nautical cities which may be represented at Kiel next month.

Whether as sailor or as gentleman, the Capital could have no finer representative than Mr. Grosvenor at the Kiel Regatta. If he can spare the time to go, the good wishes of Washingtonians will help to fill his sails on every leg, in every hotly contested race. And it is pleasant to know that the German starboat skippers, than whom there are no better sailors and sportsmen the world over, are doing all in their power to ease the problems of contestants from distant ports. Every foreign competitor will be an honored guest while in Germany and it is even reported that free transportation for their little ships will be arranged.

It has been said that politics stops at the water's edge. And the saying is certainly applicable to those who, like the starboat sailors, have the song of open water in their hearts. Out in the sunlight, keyed up for the age-old contest with wind and waves, there is no room and less desire for hateful thoughts. So millions who will never see the tiller of a starboat are hoping that this regatta will be sailed at Kiel next month, and that its friendly rivalries will prove to be the biggest August news from Germany.

Not All Wet

Because predetermination of sex is still public domain for all kinds of fancy theorizing it does not follow that the matter must be ruled out as a scientific possibility.

Last March a linen supply merchant of Newark, N. J., announced that, by virtue of a secret formula, the result of 20 years' study, he was able to guarantee his wife would bear him a male child this summer. Even without a formula he had an even chance of being right, and yet his wife ungraciously presented him with a girl.

However, the author of a formula thus invalidated is not necessarily proven wrong. There is always the possibility of a miscalculation, somewhere. The history of science, if it proves anything at all, proves that some of our most important finds started out as mad conjectures, violently disputed and discredited.

These conjectures, in many instances, were advanced by amateurs and even rank outsides. A janitor (Leeuwenhoek), for example, was the first to see microbes. A clerk in the British war office (Lockyer) identified helium. Metchnikoff hit upon his most beneficial discoveries (immunity, prevention of syphilis) through pronouncements which, at the time he made them, had no valid scientific basis. And it took the world 100 years to accept the theory advanced by Plenciz, in 1762, that many diseases are caused by separate organisms which can be grown outside the body.

Haphazard Rule-Making

When the President's Committee on Administrative Management brought in its report two years ago it pointed out that no fewer than 115 Federal agencies are issuing rules and regulations that affect the public. In some cases Congress has prescribed a formula which must be followed in thus putting statutes into effect. But in many other instances rules are issued in a haphazard manner. They may or may not safeguard the constitutional rights of citizens.

The multiplication of regulatory agencies prompted the American Bar Association several years ago to order a special survey of their rule-making habits. After prolonged study and much revising of its plans the committee assigned to this task outlined a bill which has now been approved in substance by the judiciary committees of both Senate and House. It is not a measure about which headlines are likely to be written. Yet it is undoubtedly one of the most important pieces of legislation before the present Congress.

If this measure becomes law, administrative agencies will hereafter be able to adopt regulations only "after publication of notice and public hearings." The object is to give persons affected by an act of Congress an opportunity to express their views as to what the implementing rules should provide. Such hearings, as the Brownlow committee noted two years ago, "keep rule-making from being done in a corner."

There is a good deal of controversy over a provision of the bill which would require the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia to determine, upon petition, whether rules issued by Federal agencies conform to the Constitution and the statute under which they are issued. Sponsors of the bill believe that this is a desirable means of striking at illegal rules before they are put into effect. Some other students of the subject fear that the court would be at a serious disadvantage in making such decisions with no specific case before it. Fortunately, the chief provisions of the bill could be made effective with or without this section.

Under the Bar Association plan citizens aggrieved by a decision of any Government agency or official would first carry their case to an intra-agency board. A "full and fair" hearing would be granted. In case the aggrieved party were dissatisfied with the findings and conclusion of the board, he could appeal his case to one of the circuit courts. Those courts would be instructed to set aside the decision of an intra-agency board if its findings were clearly erroneous or unsupported by substantial evidence, if a full and fair hearing had not been given, if the board had exceeded its authority or rendered a decision in conflict with the Constitution.

The need for systematic review of administrative rulings is generally admitted. Some authorities believe that this function might better be assigned to a central agency comparable to the Board of Tax Appeals. But there is much to be said for boards of review functioning in the various departments and independent commissions. Such boards could not be expected to attain the objectivity of a centralized review body, but they might be in a better position to handle the numerous minor cases that arise within a department. Any agency empowered to hear appeals from administrative rulings, to build up a record of each case and make independent findings, would be a great improvement over the present lack of protection against arbitrary administrative acts.

Aside from the study which the judiciary committees have given the Bar Association bill, it commands the careful attention of both the Senate and House. It deals with a problem of vital and increasing importance. There seems to be no question as to the constructive character of the bill as a whole, but in dealing with intricate matters of this sort details as well as general principles cannot be too diligently scrutinized.

A biologist says man would live to be 175 years old if he would live outdoors, eat lightly of simple foods and wear no clothing. That's because he wouldn't wear himself out in running from creditors.

A psychologist says, "Sex appeal consists of psychogenic or psychometric perception of psycholometric conflicting magnetism, or psychogenic positive magnetism." Or, in a word, oomph.

"Shoot A Blonde"

From the Commentator

The Nation's soda jerkers are overhauling the American language and remodeling it to suit themselves.

To shoot any kind of a drink means to squirt it from one of those shiny spouts; to cage or pop it is to serve it in a bottle.

Shoot a picnic means a cola drink for a party of four; Kelly on two signifies that a pair of limeades has been ordered; and Burn one is simply an order for a cup of hot chocolate.

Shoot a blonde was an order for a lemon soda. Shoot a brunette means a chocolate, and a wild shot called for a cherry soda. A Swiss cheese sandwich and a glass of beer is ordered: Fuzz on one and import!

Iowa Smallpox

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The reprint of July 12 from the Des Moines Register about "Unvaccinated Iowans" made me just plain mad.

During my 17 years of off-and-on residence in Iowa and where I obtained seven years of my education I cannot recall a single case of smallpox in any of the localities where I lived nor in any of the three schools I attended. In fact, I cannot recall ever hearing or reading anything of importance in regard to this disease in Iowa in spite of the so-called "black spot" reputation the article gives her.

Speaking of black spots of the Nation, how about the open draw-wells of Virginia and other Southern States? Are they shining examples of health, prosperity and progress?

On a visit to Iowa last fall I was better able to make comparisons, since I had not been there for some years and one that I noticed especially was that the people as a rule were more healthy and wholesome looking than in the District of Columbia and surrounding States. Small-pox must agree with them.

There are no immediate or noticeable bad effects from vaccination in many cases but I wonder how the health records for cancer, heart and kidney diseases, etc. compare in Iowa with the East? Perhaps the poor Iowans are better off with their terrible (?) small-pox epidemics than with all the complications that have and can follow vaccinations.

Schulte's Milk Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The town officials and citizens of Occoquan, Va., are surprised that Mrs. H. W. Wiley, Mrs. E. W. Howard, Mr. H. L. Gregg, and others are opposed to the Schulte milk bill, when the principal reason for this bill is to reduce the cost of milk in Washington, so as to enable the poor people to purchase more of it for their children.

If those good ladies and gentlemen have the welfare of the residents of Washington at heart, as they state, they should make an effort to get the cost of milk reduced. The Schulte bill if enacted, would be bound to reduce the cost of milk to consumers.

We can thank God for Mrs. John Boyle, jr., who has no other motive than getting the cost of milk reduced so the poor children starving for milk may get more of it.

THOS. F. JOYCE,
Mayor of Occoquan.

Indignant

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The record of The Post in the matter of neutrality legislation is most commendable, and no doubt much appreciated by a great majority of your readers.

At the close of the World War, an organization was created for the purpose and in the hope of preventing future "mass murder," and would have succeeded, perhaps, but for the action of misguided isolationists in the United States.

Certain Senators now opposing a sensible neutrality were among those to first successfully sabotage the infant League of Nations, thus not only pioneering in rendering useless and futile the great sacrifice of life and treasure in an effort to end all wars, but paved the way for the uncivilized and horrible "mass murder" so common in the world today. The great responsibility so nonchalantly assumed by these otherwise splendid men is little short of being pitiful.

Is it not time for indignation mass meetings to be held throughout the Nation to impress these erring gentlemen?

We would like to suggest to both Senators and Congressmen the careful reading of Mr. Mark Sullivan's article in The Post of July 13 concerning parliamentary government.

Brahms' First Symphony

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When the President exercised his democratic prerogative last Wednesday and arrived as a "latecomer," it was the first time that a President has attended a symphony concert in many a year in Washington.

Brahms' First Symphony is a much more frequent visitor. (Orchids to Dr. Kindler.) So that the confusion created was but a ripple on the waters, and old Brahms brews himself another cup of his favorite coffee and smiles with satisfaction while we collect royalties of joy listening to his music!

Lawyer Sees Constitution In Peril

To the Editor of The Post Sir: In re your editorial of July 13 entitled "A Limited Renaissance," let me, a member of the bar of the Supreme Court, say at once that never have I received a greater shock from an editorial. For you to indorse the pernicious absurdities of Robert H. Jackson such as "we are really back to the Constitution" and that the present court "has gone straight to the original document as viewed by the founding fathers" is beyond comprehension.

These remarks of the Solicitor General are on a par with the reported astounding statement of Justice Frankfurter in a recent case that "the Constitution is what it is, not what we say it is." Such pronouncements do not call for calm dissection and reasoned refutation. They are beyond the pale of reason, law, and even common sense, and in their vicious consequences maddening in the last degree to the logical, trained mind nourished on fundamental legal principles.

Listening to Attorney General Cummings in the so-called "gold cases" when he led off with a half hour of rambling statement wholly confined to painting a picture of the dark financial crisis of 1933, never once touching on the issue before the court, I thought the depths of insanity plumbed by the legal department of the present Administration. But that was only a curtain raiser.

The President of the United States is, of course, directly responsible for these lamentable exhibitions of crass ignorance and incompetence. In undermining the law of the land and bringing our courts into disrepute and contempt he has, in my opinion, struck a far greater blow at constitutional government and its blessings of liberty than any one man or group of men since the Civil War.

My purpose in addressing you is not to argue the grave developments herein cited but to enter a protest, to express my shocked surprise—yes, and anger—at any, even the least, acquiescence in such palpable, destructive nonsense which strikes at the very essence of sound government. The Washington Post, here in the National Capital, is a potent organ in the molding of public opinion and it hurts me, hurts me almost beyond expression, to find it even partially concurring with instead of denouncing such flagrant undermining of our Constitution and legal structure—the very foundation stones of the Republic. Pennsylvania Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator Guffey, Pennsylvania Democratic boss, in a radio address has brought charges against the Republican 1938 winners in his State which make up a serious indictment.

He charges that the Republicans are as wasteful, as disdainful of thrift and sanity in government as the New Dealers before them; that their mess is just as lacking in fragrancy.

Now, how can the Senator blame them?—they've had seven years of example set by the New Deal, whose main law is: Promise 'em anything; then give 'em what in your divine judgment you think is good for them—and yourself.

The Senator should remember, too, that the New Deal promised everything, from little green apples, which turned out quinces, to the more abundant life. The New Deal was, for five glorious thrill-packed months, a blaze of glory; what if the abundance did degenerate into debt and unemployment. Their hearts are still with the common man, enjoying his underprivilege on relief.

But one advance we have seen. The New Deal no longer blames its own blunders on the industrial royalists in every speech written for New Deal delivery.

The New Deal has admitted its inability to unravel the comparatively minor mess inherited from Hoover by asking for four more years to consolidate the "gains" it refers to.

The Republicans in Pennsylvania, whom the Senator says are as terrible as the New Dealers, have made a bad start. That doesn't mean they can't reverse the New Deal process. Let's judge them by the rest of their term. For a smelly travesty of government has existed in Pennsylvania under the New Deal unequaled in any other State.

Heredity Of George VI

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a letter published in today's issue of The Post, Mr. John P. Cowan takes exception to a recent item in your paper that King George VI is the great-great-grandson of George III, and claims that his relationship to the former monarch is no closer than that of a great-great-great-grandson.

Mr. Cowan overlooks the fact that George VI is descended from George III not only through his father, the late George V, but also through his mother, Queen Mary. He traces the descent of the present King through his father who was the great-grandson of Edward, Duke of Kent, the fourth son of George III, but ignores the fact that his mother, Queen Mary, is the granddaughter (not the great-granddaughter) of Adolphus, Duke of Cambridge, the seventh son of George III. The present King is five generations from George III on his father's side but only four generations from him on his mother's side and is therefore his great-great-grandson, as was stated in the news item in The Post.

Your correspondent attempts to show as little relationship as possible between the two Kings as an individual receives one-sixteenth of his heredity from a great-great-grandparent and only one-thirty-second from a great-great-great-grandparent. But because of his descent from George III through both parents, George VI is more closely related to him than either the news item or Mr. Cowan indicated, as he receives the sum of these fractions, or three-thirty-seconds, of his heredity from him.

Fatted Calf

THE OLD SKIFF had been long submerged, only its gunnel showing above the water; it had traveled up and down stream at the direction of the tide; and at last had found lodgment under Casual Smith's wharf. There it beat itself against the piling in a sort of irregular rhythm, causing the wharf to vibrate and sway ever so slightly.

"With a spell of weather I'll lose my wharf," said Casual Smith to Eph, and put him to work, himself assisting. They ran a boat beside the derelict, attached a rope to it, and eventually pulled it up on the beach where Eph "busted" it with an axe. He could almost have pulled it apart with his bare hands.

Casual Smith sat on a bench and watched him and was presently joined by Demosthenes McGinnis and Captain Ebenezer Longbow, strolling together.

"Such is life," said Captain Longbow. "Fame and failure alike achieve a bust." He puffed at his pipe and went on: "Poor old bowser; pulled up hard; permanently pickled. After a long life of usefulness and philanthropy it has now hit the rocks, metaphorically speaking. Yes, philanthropy. It has kept many a good man afloat, hasn't it? What philanthropist can do more? I have a feeling of sympathy for all derelicts. Each has an interesting log. Take this old boy. Once upon a time among the elite of creek and river society it was at last relegated to the submerged tenth; once upon a time a nifty piece of goods and now all broken up. It is easy to imagine the road it traveled when the years had impaired its strength. No steady work; just an occasional job when the other boats were busy; complaints made about its condition and appearance; and at last, flouted and sneered at by careless youth, left to rot on the beach from which it was presently torn by a sudden storm and carried into midstream where it became a menace to progress. Pardon! I mean, a menace to navigation. I seem to confound the old boat with an old man. And, indeed, there is nothing feminine about this craft."

"That's a fact," agreed Casual Smith. "I'll bet he looked like a hobo when he was new."

"With a rolling gait," said Captain Longbow. "With a bit of an outboard motor he'd go lumbering out to the bay with a couple of old city codgers for crew. And there, sweetly redolent of b.-d. crab meat and tobacco smoke the three of 'em would spend happy hours together. Think of the cheerful lies it has listened to, the weird experiences told with baited breath, the business secrets 'just among friends'; and if it sometimes leaked I'll go bail it was with good reason. And now look at the poor lad. With a little care he might have lasted longer. It's a lesson to all of us. The barnacles will get us if we don't watch out."

"I once had a skiff very much like it," said Casual Smith. "Bigger and more strongly built than my present boat; so good it was constantly being borrowed. Eph was kept busy looking for it. I called it The Prodigal Son at last and had the name painted on it. After which it disappeared altogether. That was a couple of years ago."

"And yet they say true worth is never appreciated," said Captain Longbow. "After years of endeavor it ceased to be a philanderer and began to make a living for some honest fisherman."

"It's lucky for you," laughed Casual Smith, "that the dominie isn't here or he'd say you were justifying theft."

"No," said Captain Longbow. "I'm merely lauding honest toil . . ."

"It's a good thing, perhaps, that it stuck under your wharf, Casual," said the practical D. McGinnis. "If it hadn't you'd never have pulled it ashore and it would have continued to be a constant danger. If a speed boat had ever hit it there would have been a disaster."

"And there are too darned many speedboats on the river of life," complained Captain Longbow. "A peaceful old derelict, cast off by society, lost and adrift but never unfaithful, doesn't have a chance. What it deserves is a snug harbor where it may grow waterlilies."

He rose, stretched himself, and picked up a piece of wood Eph had chopped off the bow. "There's a name here," he said, "but it's hard to make out." Then he laughed. "Darned if your Prodigal Son hasn't returned, Casual! But where's the fatted calf?"

Casual examined the piece and had an inspiration. "We'll have a little celebration," he decided; "just among ourselves and the dominie and the doc; and, of course, the ladies. Mrs. Smith will fix the date just far enough ahead to give this wood a chance to dry on the woodpile. Some of it, at least, will be good enough for stove wood. And we'll have roast veal for dinner."

"And that, at least," said Captain Longbow, "will give the returned prodigal a hot old time."

Indecent Exposure?

To The Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer is no prude nor is he in any way intolerant, but he does believe in the observance of certain decencies and proprieties in dress and conduct, and therefore feels constrained to protest against women parading the streets of Washington, especially on Sundays, nearly naked. A stranger in our midst would think the city was harboring with approval a nudist colony from the number of women one sees on the streets half and most immodestly dressed.

If the parents of modern girls are either indifferent to the manner of their dress, or are without sufficient control over them to compel them to dress properly, it is about time for the authorities to enforce the laws against indecent exposure and stop such exhibitions as are seen daily upon our streets.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Fakery Charged

IN CHARGING the United Press with fakery, President Roosevelt condemned the familiar newspaper phrase "it is reported," and said it was a practice, too often engaged in, to invent reports out of the clear sky. I believe Mrs. Roosevelt also objected to this and similar terms some time ago.

The charge of faking in this instance concerns a State Department story, and the President seems to have convinced himself that the two Washington reporters who collaborated on the piece, one working in the Senate, the the other at the State Department, sat down and, with cold premeditation, invented a false report. He doesn't entertain the possibility that the story could have been planted, although this is one of the risks that Washington reporters must contend with.

It has been known to happen in all the big capitals, and the Associated Press had an embarraising experience of this kind with a Vatican story about two years ago. But unless a journalist has been bribed or is devoted to one of the treacherous "isms" he would have no motive for inventing fakes, and certainly use of the expression which the President denounces as an evasion of responsibility is no choice of htose who find themselves compelled to employ it. This evasion begins not with the reporters, but with men on the President's side of the problem, which is to say the politicians and officials who conduct the Government.

Common Practice With Politicians

A REPORTER would be glad, in all cases, to give the name of the man who issued the information, and when he fails to do so and attributes his story to "official circles" or other equally vague sources the fault is not his. It is common practice among politicians and officials to give information with the condition that the source is not to be revealed. Presidents have done this, and it is my impression that Mr. Roosevelt himself has given out information with the understanding that it could be used but not attributed to him. In such cases the reporter uses the form which the President now condemns, or one of its variants.

Although it is possible that the story was planted and possible that it was false, it does not necessarily follow that it was planted or false. The President says it was false, but he said last week that political considerations did not enter into the appointment of Paul McNutt to his new position. And those who know Lyle Wilson, the manager of the United Press Washington bureau, will give consideration to the fact that he just happens to be one of the best journalists in the country. It might be kept in mind, also, that the President recently had the effrontery to call him in and lecture him not on the facts of a story which he had written but on the emphasis or treatment.

Cleverness of Move Now Is Apparent

EARLY IN HIS rule Mr. Roosevelt's antipress campaign was directed only at the publishers, and he sympathized with the journalists as unfortunate, ink-stained wretches who had to pocket their principles and ethics and serve their masters. He may have had in mind John Boettiger, now his son-in-law and an ecstatic New Deal editor and political agent, because Mr. Boettiger at that time was writing stories—for a salary—to the effect that the President was trying to make himself a dictator. This patronizing attitude and the assumption that the reporters shared his opinion of American journalism won the President some early following in the corps, but as time passed, resentment developed because many newspaper people have a feeling that for all its shortcomings journalism is in no way inferior to the President's trade of politics and that reporters and publishers—as a group or as two groups—compare quite well with politicians. Recently the President has singled out individual working newspapermen for his displeasure. The early crush, definitely, is over.

The cleverness of the move against the United Press and Wilson is apparent. By this denunciation Mr. Roosevelt has created in the public mind a suggestion that the United Press and Wilson are his enemies and that henceforth news unfavorable to the Administration, especially political news, may be discounted. He has put Wilson on the spot.

Juvenile Court Faces Cut in Scope

Funds Are Reduced Despite Tax Saving of $123,000 Last Year

The Juvenile Court, which, in one department alone, collected for the care of indigents in the District $222,418 in the year ending June 30, 1939, faces curtailment of services with its budget cut from $104,-370 for the year just closed, to $103,000 for that ending June 30, 1940, Judge Fay Bentley said last night.

Out of the reduced appropriation, included in the bill which passed Congress Friday, will also come $420 automatic step-ups in salary for some of the workers.

It was a "blue Monday" for Judge Bentley as she compared needs of the court to the budget provisions and attempted to answer the question of what the discrepancy means to the District.

Saves Taxpayers' Cash

She pointed out that already each adult probation officer was handling what was considered eight times a normal case load and that their services result not only in an actual saving to taxpayers in money which otherwise would have to be spent in relief but also in protection to the community from problems of crime and delinquency which follow neglect of children.

She made an effort to evaluate in one field of the court's work the effect of curtailment of such services. In the five years since her appointment as judge of the court, there has been an increase of 121.3 per cent in total collection for non-support of wife and/or dependent children, or children born out of wedlock, with an increase of only 30.7 per cent in the number of new cases in that period.

Last year money accumulated by lapses in filling vacancies on the staff at various times was applied to this work and the amount of collections was 18 per cent over that of the year previous, with only a 9.7 per cent increase in the number of new cases.

"This indicates," she said, "how thousands of dollars are saved with the investment of a comparatively small sum. The increase in collections over the five-year period has been accomplished by simplification of methods and putting them on a business basis combined with the work of personnel professionally trained and experienced in the field for which they have special aptitude."

"While that represents a saving in money, the human element is vastly more important and more costly to the community when it suffers," declared Judge Bentley.

"Many persons think of the Juvenile Court as dealing only with children who get into difficulty. When cases involve their non-support and neglect, they are in just as serious trouble but in a different category. For each man under court order there is an average of two and a half children concerned.

"The unmarried mother who comes to the attention of the court is also peculiarly in need of the service of the social work department—and the rate of illegitimacy in the District is relatively high, being 32.7 per 1,000 live births in 1935 compared to 39.7 for the United States as a whole (the latter figure from the 1933 census report).

"Responsibility of the probation department for service to the unmarried mother and her child is augmented by the fact that there are, in the District, no special provisions for care and protection of such mothers and their children. A considerable number of unmarried mothers appearing before the Juvenile Court are between 14 and 18 years of age, presenting a serious problem both in the case of the mother and the child.

"Over 50 per cent of the current case load of the adult probation department is concerned with the established of paternal responsibility for the child born out of wedlock.

"In the case of non-support of a wife and/or dependent children, the probation officer to whom the father is assigned endeavors to aid the probationer in carrying out the court order of payments to support his children," Judge Bentley explained. "Steady employment for the husband, care of the children and planning for the household, for the wife, and the joint working out of the budget between them are the goals which the probation officer attempts to accomplish.

"His services include legal work necessary in making adjustments with the individual's creditors, concerning equity in property in the assignment of compensation and in matters relative to eviction, medical or psychiatric care if it is needed. Adjustments also are made to insure attendance of children at school and assistance is given, if needed, in their general supervision."

"We are not complaining about long hours or overwork," said Judge Bentley, "but of the curtailment of services to people who are hungry, whose rent is not paid, who are sick and in distress. Our nearness to the suffering of those served makes it more than a matter of dollars and cents—but, even from that standpoint, it should be remembered that the court saved the District, whether from taxpayers' money or from private philanthropy, $123,846 in excess of its budget."

Books And Things

Two Novels

THE PRESENT and the past—the reader who pays his money may take his choice of these two novels. Both are well written, though the quality of each one is different; both are worth reading and well made. Perhaps it is a comment on the present of our own days that, of the two, the novel of the past seems, in certain ways, to paint not only the more attractive but the more solid way of life. Let's begin, however, with the present.

THE PRESENT is a timeless present—an old palace in the Indian hills where a handful of Anglo-Catholic nuns have come to establish the Convent of St. Faith. It is the contrast between Eastern ways and Western that interests Rumer Godden in "Black Narcissus" (Little, Brown, $2.50), the contrast not only between external habits but between the ways of the spirit.

A well-written novel in the manner of James Hilton, the tale moves smoothly to its appointed conclusion. The sisters, even the brilliant and self-willed Clodagh, are beaten in the end by the immemorial East they have never quite understood. The village holy man remains in his place, the typical drunken Englishman remains typical and drunken, the General Bahadur makes appropriate remarks on the failure.

It is all very neatly done, and, somehow, in the end, unsatisfying, like an exotic fruit that has no real taste. It is done with skill and color, but reading it, the names of other books pop into the mind—"A Passage to India," "The Rains Came," "Lost Horizon," yes even "The Green Goddess."

OF THE TWO books, "Listen for the Voices" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50), by Anne Colver, though it is more of a genre-picture than a novel, has the surer reality. A study of the great days of Concord—the days of Thoreau and Emerson and Alcott—it does manage to recapture that fugitive Indian summer of the New England mind.

The Concord way was self-limited—it was always apples and brook-water rather than nectar and ambrosia—but there was a nobility in it. It was, at times, a self-conscious nobility, but it was a nobility, nevertheless. And, in her simple story of how three different girls responded to the plain living and high thinking, Miss Colver has succeeded in bringing to life the critical, aspiring, petty, extraordinary village that Concord was.

THERE WERE Emersons and Alcotts—there were also sturdy New Englanders who thought Alcott shiftless and Emerson a windbag. Miss Colver is, naturally and justly, on the side of the angels, but that does not prevent her from trying to show both sides of the picture. As far as her plot is concerned, it is more or less of a convenience by which to display her character, but she has drawn genuine and lifelike portraits, not only of the well known.

There is, for instance, Julia Glasgow, the odd, rebellious girl who was going to be a woman doctor but got trapped by nature on the way. There is Laura Shipman, the "fine" woman, always thinking of others, and yet a direful failure as mother and wife. There are excellent and vivid glimpses of the Alcott household, a fine ride with Mr. Emerson, a characteristic adventure of Henry Thoreau's. But, more than this, there is a sense of a community and a time.

TURN THE paperweight over and back again; the snow begins to fall on the little houses, the people come out of their doors. There is going to be a lyceum lecture tonight—a lecture by Mr. Emerson—would you like to attend?—but there is no question of that.

You are bound to attend, if you believe in plain living and high thinking, no matter if your nose feels frozen on the way to the lyceum. And Miss Colver is a good guide, for she views her mixed bag of small and great with sympathy and understanding. As a novelist, she has her defects—Mary Olive Shipman starts out well as a heroine but fades toward the end of the book—there are dropped stitches in the plot—and she is a little too anxious to get every famous person in.

But there remain a genuine sense of scene and an unpretentious feeling for characterization that mark her as a very promising writer. If you're tired of the hurly-burly and the shouting, I think you'll like "Listen for the Voices." It hasn't any ax to grind, but it shows a part of what we were.

Building Employes Leave Posts in Protest Strike

Ten employes of the Normandy Building, 1626 K street northwest, went on strike yesterday to protest the dismissal of two charwomen Saturday. All are members of Local 82, Building Service Employes Union, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

L. A. Montague, president of the Normandy Corporation, said the women were discharged for "inefficiency," after numerous complaints from tenants. James Kimbro, head of the union local, maintained the women were dismissed for union activity. The building intends to hire cheaper labor, he charged.

Arbitration of the dispute must await the National Labor Relations Board's decision on the union's petition for certification as bargaining agent, according to Stanley V. White, Labor Department conciliator.

The union is demanding an eight-hour day for male employes and a $10 monthly pay increase, in addition to reinstatement of the two charwomen. The men at present work 10 hours per day.

The two charwomen are Alberta Barnes, colored, of 1840 Fifteenth street northwest, and Lillian Elder, colored, of 1124 Sixth street northeast.

16 Publications Less in U. S. Now

Philadelphia, July 17 (U.P.).—The number of publications in the United States was decreased by 16 during the first six months of 1939, N. W. Ayer & Son's directory of newspapers and periodicals reported today.

The weekly newspaper field showed a gain of 23. The daily newspaper field reported a net loss of 24 publications in the six-month period, with eight new papers announced and 22 suspensions. The total number of dailies in the United States was announced at 2,002, compared with 2,056 at the end of 1938.

Other periodicals, general magazines and trade publications showed a net loss of 17, bringing the total of all publications to 19,361, against 19,378 at the close of 1938.

WPA Worker Threat Over

By Mark Sullivan

Lesson Learned

THE WPA STRIKES may be ended or not—probably this phenomenon will be a few weeks tapering off. But the series of WPA strikes as a threat, as an attempt to intimidate the Government and Congress, is over. The WPA administrator has stood firm, and has been backed up. Attorney General Frank Murphy has said that no one has a right to strike against the Government any time, any place. President Roosevelt has said the same. Congress, which enacted the legislation against which the strikes were made, has stood firm. The very small number of Senators and Representatives who said they would try to get the law changed have given up.

By these strikes and this outcome of them, we pass a landmark and learn a lesson. For realizing what the lesson is, there will be service in a brief recital of what led up to the present situation:

WPA began in January, 1935, with Mr. Roosevelt's annual message to Congress. He said that merely giving the unemployed food, or cash for food, is not enough. He said we must give them work: "We must preserve not only the bodies of the unemployed from destitution, but also their self-respect, their self-reliance and courage and determination." In short, Mr. Roosevelt said, we must give the unemployed jobs.

Unions Brought Pressure to Bear

MR. ROOSEVELT did not initiate the mistake which led to the recent strikes. It was not Mr. Roosevelt who set up the theory that a skilled worker on WPA must be paid the same per-hour rate of wages that he would receive if normally employed on a private job. On the contrary, what Mr. Roosevelt said about pay, in his message to Congress January 3, 1935, was: "Compensation on emergency public projects should be in the form of security payments, which should be larger than the amount now received as a relief dole, but at the same time not so large as to encourage the rejection of opportunities for private employment. . . ."

So far as Mr. Roosevelt incurred responsibility for what later happened, it lay in his failure to foresee what would develop. This lack of foresight about the operation of economic law, and about human nature, is the explanation of a whole category of New Deal mistakes.

It was the labor unions who introduced the trouble about pay. It was they who set up the theory that a carpenter or a plumber or a musician on WPA must receive the same per-hour rate of wages, usually a rather high rate, that the unions had fixed for normal work on private jobs. It was the unions who brought pressure on Congress to include this provision when Congress was enacting the legislation setting up WPA.

While Congress provided that skilled workers must receive the same rate of pay per hour that they received on private jobs, Congress at the same time provided that the total pay received in a month by anybody, skilled or unskilled, should be the same. The only variation of pay in WPA was geographical, to accord with different standards of living in different parts of the country. The range was from about $30 a month in the South to about $80 in large Eastern cities. Skilled laborers got the same total per month as unskilled laborers.

Employed by WPA Because of Need

THE CONSEQUENCE was that while unskilled men worked 130 hours for a fixed amount per month, skilled workers got the same amount of pay for working as little as 60 hours. A skilled worker in a large Eastern city, getting a rate of $1.50 per hour, could earn his maximum total by working 60 hours a month, barely 2½ hours a day. And he was not allowed to work more. He was not allowed to work more on WPA, and if he did work on any private job he had to do it in secret, furtively, for if WPA found him out, he was dropped from WPA. The effect on men's morale was directly the opposite of what Mr. Roosevelt had hoped. Instead of men's self-respect being preserved, they were forced either into idleness two-thirds of the time or else had to practice duplicity to work more.

These, and other defects of WPA became recognized. The heads of WPA, recognizing the defects, asked Congress to change the law and Congress did. Under the new law, everybody on WPA must work 130 hours a month. This means, as a rule, that every worker, skilled or unskilled, will receive the same per-hour rate. The skilled workers do not like it. Heads of labor unions express outrage over it.

One can understand their resentment. But what they fail to see is that WPA employs them, not because of their skill but because of their need. Hence WPA must pay, not according to skill, but according to need. Probably WPA, as a job-giving institution, will have to end. WPA is not the cure for unemployment.

There can be no such thing as a "gift" of a job. Government can only "give" food and other necessities, or cash to pay for them. Government can, however, "create" jobs. Government can create great public works, in the way Government has often done, with contracts let to contractors who hire the men they need on a normal basis and employ them full time at the prevailing rate of wage for each kind of work.

Slow Coming Of Age

The United States As A Great Power

THE UNITED STATES may be described as a great power with a small power mentality. According to historians, the United States became a great power 40 years ago when, as a result of the war with Spain, the American flag was planted in the Caribbean and the far Pacific.

But 40 years have not been enough to change the century-old habits of mind of the American people. In part, at least, our thinking is still geared to realities which have long since disappeared. Thus the frontier is gone, but not the grip it for so long had on our imaginations. Isolation from Europe is a vain hope in a time when regular commercial planes span the Atlantic in a day, but we continue to think of the ocean as a barrier instead of a bridge.

BEING an idealistic and passionate people we have never practiced our isolationist philosophy to the point of being indifferent to what goes on overseas. From the days of the French Revolution and Citizen Genet to the present time we have taken a keen interest in the broad political developments across the water, judging those developments almost invariably in moral terms. That habit of mind remains.

During recent years men have argued with great vehemence that the place of the United States is on the side of Europe's democracies. This has led such men as Senator Borah, who do not want us to take sides, to ask where are the democracies, with his finger pointing in the obvious direction of Great Britain and France.

ACTUALLY the issue before the United States has never been whether to support the democracies, as democracies, or not to withhold support from them because they happed to be, by definition, nations whose governments do not resemble ours. The real issue has not been an idealistic but a practical one.

That issue is how the United States can best live its own life in peace. Put in such terms the question of our relationship with Great Britain and France, on the one hand, and Germany and Italy on the other, only incidentally involves the type of political systems they happen to have.

The fact is that the totalitarian states do differ from Great Britain and France in a multitude of ways—in their disrespect for individual rights, in their glorification of the state and its dictator, in their racial philosophy, etc., even as they differ from this country. But the one difference that really matters to us as a Nation and matters vitally is that Germany and Italy are expanding states which regard war as a useful instrument of policy, whereas Great Britain and France are static states which are desperately eager to remain at peace and have paid a tremendous price to keep it.

IT WOULD be an exaggeration to say that the United States is in imminent danger of attack by the totalitarian powers and Japan. The ocean has shrunk but it has not shrunk that much—yet. We can still remain within our borders in comparative safety. But the period of grace is not indefinite. Should Great Britain and France be overwhelmed there is no certainty that the attentions of Hitler and Mussolini, not to mention the Japanese, would not be directed toward the undeveloped and weak and relatively helpless nations to our south.

Should that unhappy day dawn, even the most convinced isolationists would probably be willing to have the United States throw its full weight into the scales in defense of our neighbors. Many of them say that now. But what they forget is, first, that Europe is much closer in time and distance to South America than we are and, second, that with the barrier of the British fleet and the present European balance of power destroyed, the task of defending this hemisphere would become infinitely more difficult.

WE HAVE a period of grace. Thank heaven for that. But what are we doing with it? The very fact that we are in no immediate danger of attack suggests that we can, with relative impunity, do things which the nations nearer the periphery of danger cannot do. We can, for instance, do all in our power to strengthen those nations which, whatever else may be true of them, do happen to stand for peace and against aggression. We can do it in perfect legality and without fear of reprisals. But at this point the attitude that the United States is not really a great power, and the least vulnerable of great powers, but a highly vulnerable small power, stands in the way.

THE ACTION of the House majority and of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is proof of this. The assumption behind the refusal to lift the embargo on arms is that the United States must adopt a negative attitude toward all and sundry, for not to do so might invite the antagonism of the powers that would be placed at a disadvantage.

The fact that this action does place at a disadvantage the very powers, such as Great Britain and France, which in any rational and unemotional and completely hard-boiled view of the situation are today bulwarks of our defense system, does not seem to count. The attitude is as senseless as it is bound to prove, in the long run, self-defeating.

Self-interest demands that the United States play a role commensurate with its power and commensurate, also, with the degree of safety which, for the time being at least, it enjoys. We can yet do something to bolster up the crumbling structure of peace. If we do not it is not merely the nations of Europe that will suffer from the ensuing collapse. And time presses.

uted gains in retail trade.

Consumption of raw materials and manufactured goods for many months, trade reports indicate, has been running ahead of production in some lines so that lower inventories have compelled resumption of buying.

The most dramatic instance of this, analysts say, was the recent heavy wave of buying in copper, one of the biggest in history of the copper market, attributed in part to armament buying.

Utility Stocks Lag

The dark side of the picture is the relative lag in recovery in utility and rail equipment and private spending for expansion of productive facilities generally. Much of the demand for tools and machinery in recent months has come from abroad and has been connected with the armament drive.

Rated as potent in its business effects has been the upturn in building. Residential building in the first half of the year, as reported by the F. W. Dodge Corporation, was 61 per cent ahead of last year and topped 1937—the previous best recovery year—by 25 per cent. Private building accounted for the bulk of this improvement.

In heavy construction projects, on the other hand, Government-financed work increased 42 per cent compared with only 2 per cent in private contracts. Total non-residential building was up 19.

Building, aircraft manufacturing, ship construction and other comparatively active industries have absorbed more manpower and unemployment figures have been whittled down.

The National Industrial Conference board, a private research organization supported chiefly by corporations, in its latest report, for May, estimates unemployment at 9,881,000 compared with 11,362,000 in May, 1938, around the bottom of the 1937-38 slump in business.

Some analysts ascribe the improvement in trade partly to the higher level of "deficit spending" by Government the past year. Col. Leonard Ayres, Cleveland economist, in a current business survey, says the net contributions by the Federal Government to the Nation's spending stream through relief and works outlay averages about $12,000,000 every working day, supplemented by $4,000,000 from State and municipal sources.

The Delicatessen Dealers Had a Name for It.

The radio broadcasters have passed a code emphasizing that all programs must observe "the accepted standards of good taste." Okay, but where is there any standard of good taste today? And what is it? A family magazine prints two pages showing a grewsome beheading; the big laugh scenes in the two outstanding musical comedy hits in New York are those in which the comedians drop their pants; a wow laugh line on stage, screen and the air today, incredible as it may seem, is "It stinks!" Standards of good taste, my eye! It is going to take a world war to restore 'em.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wed. in Love Match, to Younger Man, Wife Says Others' Mean Remarks Are Spoiling Union

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a woman in my early thirties, 6 years older than my husband—a big, good-looking man with a charming personality—to whom I have been happily married for seven years. We are very much in love, have the same interests, and have never lost the spirit of fun we enjoyed in courtship days. We come from the same part of the country, our respective families approve of the marriage, and we have a very congenial relationship with both mothers. I am no more jealous of my husband than he is of me, as we are both pretty sure of each other.

But the problem is this: People seem to envy our happiness, even to the extent of going out of their way to try to make us unhappy . . . The main thing they pick on, of course, is the difference in ages—it being about the only talking point. One woman in particular has gone out of her way to be catty, so much so that her husband called her for it. She nagged so much on the age point that my husband finally called her on it, also. He told her she must have an age complex and that, while it didn't bother him, he thought she should control it . . .

This woman even tried making up to my husband, and when he ignored her she tried criticizing him—saying he bossed me too much, which was so utterly ridiculous that everyone looked at her in amazement. Also, another older woman (to whom we had been particularly nice) referred to the difference in our ages in a most malicious way, thus completely spoiling one whole week-end. My husband and I have discussed the situation frankly and have agreed not to let it bother us, but it does. We have tried to develop a line of defense, but it is all most unpleasant. . . .

Of course, all couples do not react to us in like manner but the few who do upset us, usually just when we are enjoying ourselves most. My husband has discussed this with his boss, a very fine man, and the latter says that most happy couples have to contend with much the same thing. He says the average woman doesn't marry for love and resents a couple that is happily married, especially when the husband is good looking. Is this true?

If we are happier than the average couple (as we are) in spite of the difference in our ages, why should it bother other people? I am sure we do not flaunt our happiness in the faces of others. My husband's classmates like me, and mine like him, but a few of the wives of his classmates have pointedly belittled and criticized me. Most of them have not had the cultural advantages that I have had—but I have been extremely careful to minimize this difference. Just what do you think is the cause of their attitude? And will it eventually wear us down? I do hope you can help us. BEWILDERED.

Neurotic Supposition

DEAR BEWILDERED: There is more to this problem than appears on the surface—or, rather, than is suspected and reported by yourself. I cannot believe that others' envious resentment of your married happiness would motivate spiteful attacks of the kind described. More probably, there are irritating qualities about your own personality or social behavior which provoke exasperated reactions from others—reactions which you lack the good sense to ignore. The only other possible explanation is that you associate with an obnoxiously brittle, pseudo-sophisticated assortment of persons, who think it clever to be cruel. However, I incline to believe that you are probably your own worst enemy—leading with your chin into painful situations of the very type you most wish to avoid.

To begin with, six years' difference in ages between husband and wife—with the latter the senior—is almost imperceptible, nowadays; and so slight a difference is speedily erased—physically, mentally and psychically—in a few years of really happy marriage. It has been said—and most of us can point to notable examples to support the statement—that a difference in ages (with the husband the younger) up to 10 years may be regarded as a negligible handicap to successful marriage, if the union is implemented with such fundamental requisites for compatability as authentic sexual harmony, common interests, similar or identical social goals, responsible character and healthy personality on the part of both husband and wife.

After all, better educated men and women with some choice in the matter don't marry, any longer, entirely for the purpose of subscribing to a conventional pattern of "the thing to do." The more intelligent, enlightened, self and socially aware individuals seek, in their mates, a person who can provide them, and evoke from them in turn, the co-operation, encouragement, stimulus and manifold practical assistance which will make for their greatest social fulfillment and deepest personal satisfaction. Such persons have come sufficiently of age, psychologically, to be properly concerned more with the substance than with the decor (shall we say?) of their marital arrangement.

Your morbid suffering is probably due to the fact that you have never achieved a common-sense adjustment to the age difference. I imagine that you entered marriage sorely sensitive on the point, and have since remained aggressively on the lookout for, and on the defensive against, any reminders of or allusions to that difference. Very likely you are reading into the minds and utterances of others certain hurtful attitudes that are primarily a reflection of your own state of mind; and, in addition, magnifying out of all proportion to their essential intent or meaning, whatever references others may make—either innocently or maliciously—to the subject.

What remarks are made may be inspired by your own well-meant but misguided efforts to overcompensate for your intensely felt seniority. Perhaps you engage in flagrantly kittenish behavior—a type of exhibitionism which nauseates the typical young modern, provoking his outspoken, most cutting, criticism. Or, perhaps, you invite smarting comment in other ways; as, for instance, in laughingly calling attention to the difference, hoping that some hearer will avow that he never could believe you were the older of the two. In any event, and however you precipitate that brand of sarcasm which you most dread, I am inclined to think your own acute self-consciousness is the real trouble-maker.

By making your husband privy to your morbid reactions and speculations you are flirting with disaster so far as your marriage is concerned. Keep it up and in time he will bring to the marriage, and to you, the same attitudes which you impute to others. In my opinion, this is a problem for a psychologist, psychiatrist or psychoanalyst—someone who can review the picture in painstaking detail and bring about changed mental and emotional attitudes toward the age factor on your part. 'Can She Bake a Cherry Pie?' If Not, Here's a Recipe

Bernice Burns, Guest Food Editor, Gives Directions for One With Meringue Topping; Also Has Liking for Steak and Tomatoes

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington are presented daily in this column.

THE CHERRY has always played its part in history. After the Romans invaded Britain, cherry trees grew on their camping grounds. It doesn't seem quite right that anything so good as cherry pie should result from war. There is the George Washington chopping episode and also a story that a cherry tree made Broadway change its course. With such a background it seems that the cherry pie deserves a special eulogy.

MISS BURNS

Bernice Burns, our guest food editor today, is in charge of kitchen planning of the Electric Institute. Miss Burns is a native of Iowa and was educated at the University of Iowa, majoring in home economics. Following her graduation she served in the training department of Stewart & Co., Baltimore, for a year. She left to assume her present position three years ago. Miss Burns is active in home economics circles serving now as program chairman of the local Home Economics Women in Business.

When asked for her favorite recipe, Miss Burns said, "Personally I think that steak and tomatoes are nature's finest foods. I like steak broiled, medium rare and tomatoes in any form, but preferably raw. Adding sugar to tomatoes is a sin against nature. Of course, there are some people who consider that eating sliced tomatoes with scrambled eggs for breakfast is carrying an enthusiasm too far, but I like it. My pet recipe is for cherry meringue pie."

Cherry Meringue Pie

Drain juice from one No. 2 can of red sour cherries. Add water to bring quantity to 2 cups. Mix 6 tablespoons of sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 teaspoons flour and ½ teaspoon salt. Dissolve in ½ cup of the cold liquid and add to juice. Stir in 2 beaten egg yolks and cook over low heat until thickened. Stir constantly. Remove from unit, flavor with 1 teaspoon lemon juice and 1 teaspoon sherry, if desired. Fold in the cherries and pour into baked pie shell. Top with meringue and bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes until brown.

Pie Shell—Use 1 cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 5½ tablespoons fat and 3 tablespoons ice water.

Hollywood, Hub-Deep In Genius, Still Is Feeble on Good Words

HOLLYWOOD.—It was 11:20 of a murky morning when the rattler disgorged Hall and Stella Unger and myself at Pasadena, and a kind friend wafted us to Hollywood in a fleet-ying barouche.

We cabbaged a suite in a nice hotel in the heart of things, two blocks from the Brown Derby and ten minutes from three major studios. Hopping on the phone, I stirred up all my press agent friends, and in an hour we had the date book stuffed for a week. Relaxing just long enough to catch the breath, we rallied round for tonics and dinner at the Derby with some Paramount pals, including Gretchen Messer, its pretty fashion editor, and also Gwenn Walters, fashion editor of one of the biggest fan magazines. Stella, titupped by her first visit to filmland in many years, discovered she had walked three blocks toward the Derby dinner wearing her bedroom slippers!

Then a studio car hauled us to a preview of a little summer college comedy called "Million Dollar Legs," with pretty Betty Grable playing a lead and her young baldish husband, Jackie Coogan (the great "Kid") doing a very minor bit. Baby, that's Hollywood in a nutshell!

After that to a mug of tea at a popular studio oasis and to bed at midnight, dreaming of the morrow when I should feast my enamoured eyes on Charles Boyer, dream man of the hour since his wonderous work in "Algiers" and "Love Affair." Hall fell asleep muttering "Hedy Lamarr is a myth!"

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: Hollywood may be hub-deep in genius, but it is still feeble at wordmaking. After all these years, its inevitable adjective for everything, from the mealiest film to Bette Davis, is "Terrific!"

Code for Hostesses

MEASURES to make summer visiting easier for women who are inveigled into week-ends and vacations with friends and relatives were announced yesterday by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey at her press conference.

Mrs. DeGoofey

The aggressive president of the Do Something About It League was wearing a light print dress and her summer hat.

"Where is your darling new fall chapeau, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked a fashion writer.

"I have put it away until September," was the reply. "Now that all other women know that I have a new fall hat and that I had it before the Fourth of July, I see no reason to bother wearing it until early fall.

"My immediate concern now is the regulation of the summer hostess. Now, as everyone knows, I have heretofore devoted my reform efforts to guests. In fact, the abolition of the overnight guest has long been one of the major planks in my platform. But I really feel that women guests have their troubles, too, and frequently make martyrs of themselves, in the homes of hostesses who should never be licensed to entertain."

"What about men guests, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked an editorial writer.

"Men guests always manage to take care of themselves, I notice," was the reply. "But there is a type of woman guest of the doormat variety who needs protection. For her benefit I have drawn up a questionnaire for hostesses. Now, any woman invited to stay overnight away from home should, if she is such a fool as to accept such an invitation, always send out this questionnaire in advance to her prospective hostess. Here it is:

Hostess Questionnaire

"Is your husband addicted to anecdotes?

"Has he a favorite easy chair that no one dare approach?

"Does he walk up and down the hall clearing his throat or coughing if anyone keeps him waiting for a meal—especially breakfast?

"Will I have to use the same bathroom in which he shaves?

"Is he frequently encountered in the hall in his shorts en route to the bathroom?

"Has he a back yard vegetable garden behind a patch of weeds to which he conducts sight-seeing tours?

"Do your children arise at 6 a. m. and visit all bedrooms for an early romp?

"Have they reached an age when they can read the funny papers themselves?

"Is their favorite game 'Bear' or 'Wolf' with an adult taking the 'heavy role?'

"Do you keep any of your husband's clothes, the bed linen, or the children's playthings in the guest room closet?

"Will the closet contain at least six empty hangers for my use?

"Will I be guaranteed a clothes brush, a drinking glass, one pair of scissors, sewing utensils and a package of bicarbonate of soda?

"Will I have to spend any evening with the Prosers next door, the Spellmasters from across the street, or the Trotters who have just returned from Bermuda?

"If I am taken on any motor tour of your town will you guarantee that I will not have to go through any buildings?

"Will I have to attend any amateur theatricals in the town hall?

"Have you enough mirrors—and flattering ones—conveniently located in all parts of the house so that I can keep myself up to the glamour girl standards expected of me?

"Will you guarantee that I will not have to serve as an umpire in any arguments between yourself and husband?

Guest Equipment

"Now that completes my questionnaire to date. However, I expect to add to it as I am now starting out on a visit of friends and acquaintances in which I shall collect more data on the guest problem. You may further announce that I have a nice little surprise for my hostesses—one that should make me a much more interesting and charming guest. They will find me equipped with one of the new individual portable radios."

Ceilings Take On Gay Note In Decorations

Time Is Past When White or Cream Settled Painters' Question

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE TIME HAS passed when you could settle the ceiling question by the "white or cream" answer to the painter's question. Very properly the ceiling has come into the new decorative plans, for it actually occupies a large proportion of the area of the room. In recent exhibitions of new rooms, here are some of the ceiling treatments that have been successful.

AWNING STRIPES. In a delicately charming room for a little girl the side walls were painted in a soft blue, the floor was carpeted in a deeper plain blue. Curtains and the spread and canopy for a white-painted poster bed were in white muslin finished with thick white cotton fringe. The ceiling was papered in soft blue and white striped paper, put on with stripes converging tent fashion in the center, while around the edges striped scallops were dropped down over the edge of the side walls like a border. Simple, and very effective.

DOVES IN THE SKY.—A new powder room with pastel walls has the ceiling papered in a paper patterned with doves and roses.

PLAID TOP. In a simple modern bedroom, the walls were painted pale yellow and the ceiling was papered in a yellow and gray plaid. The furniture in this room was in pale natural wood, with twin beds set in a single wide headboard. This had a wood frame filled in with interlaced hand-woven fabric bands that repeated the design of the yellow and gray plaid overhead.

TRANQUIL. In a formal dining room the walls above a white dado were papered in a light gray-blue or white paper in a receding all-over pattern. This continued over the ceiling, created a spacious, tranquil feeling.

PAINTED CEILINGS. Such colors as terra cotta for the ceiling of a pine paneled room, for instance, are stunning. Or pale pink for the ceiling of a pastel papered room. Or silver paper for the ceiling of a blue room.

Society's Playspot Will Not Be Closed

Mrs. John M. Gross Declares 'There's Positively No Truth in Rumor' That 1925 F Street Club Is Through

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

BEST NEWS I've had lately is that, no matter what you've heard over the teacups or read in your favorite newspaper, the 1925 F Street Club is NOT to be closed. From none other than Mrs. John M. Gross herself comes word that "there's positively no truth in the rumor," and that whoever started it was barking up the wrong tree.

Funny thing about Washington gossip—it can stem out of thin air and grow in importance with each repetition until first thing you know it's accepted as fact . . . until somebody "on the inside" puts a bomb under it and explodes the whole rumor into air once more.

Well, that's what has happened in this case. Mrs. Gross emphatically insists the story is all wrong, and Washington society is more than happy that one of its favorite gathering places is to carry on. It seems that plans already are under way for a number of parties there next winter and that while, as usual, the club doors may close briefly toward the end of summer in order to get everything shipshape for next season, it will be open and flourishing in September.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Gross (the former Laura Curtis) who is spending the summer at her home, Four Oaks Farm, near Bethlehem, Pa., will be back in the Capital as often as necessary to keep the club running exactly as it did in the days when she made her home there. What's more, there is a good chance she will be on hand for the gala opening luncheon in the fall, as well as for many events through the winter.

Kitty Carlisle Draws Society to Olney

Summertime society is not putting all its eggs in one diversion. Time was, and not so long ago, when anybody left in town in July, took out to a country club to spend all his spare time. Now, country theaters are the most popular attractions. One was last night, especially, when Kitty Carlisle opened at the Olney Theater in "Tonight Or Never."

Truth is, Miss Carlisle has a number of friends in the Capital's upper crust, and a sizable section was on hand to see her initial performance. She has been here countless times, both professionally and socially, and has been feted right and left by many Capital notables, including the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki.

Her most consistent Washington escort, however, has been Decio de Moura, former Brazilian Embassy Secretary, who is now connected with his country's commission to the New York World's Fair.

Mention of Brazil reminds me—Gen. Goes Monteiro, chief of staff of the Brazilian army, who was expected to return here Sunday afternoon, is not back yet. He's due to arrive this afternoon but is leaving Mme. Monteiro in New York, as his stay here will be brief. He is scheduled to sail July 21. The Brazilian Ambassador and Mme. Martins will be off August 11 for a vacation in their homeland.

Ambassador Davies Arrives in New York

Comings and goings are still making social items around these parts . . . Joseph E. Davies, United States Ambassador to Belgium, who arrived yesterday from Brussels on the Cunard White Star liner Queen Mary, is expected to go soon to Camp Topridge on Upper St. Regis Lake, where Mrs. Davies and her daughter, Miss Nedenia Marjorie Hutton, have been for the past few days . . . The United States Ambassador to Cuba, J. Butler Wright, has been in Washington for several days and is staying at the Carlton . . . Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper returned yesterday morning from Florida, where they were called following the death of their friend, W. M. Christie . . . If Congress decides to ring the bell for adjournment any time soon, boats to Europe will be loaded with Washingtonians . . . Among those planning to be off early in August, if Congress calls a halt by then, are Warren Lee Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, who will go to Paris for a few weeks.

Washington friends of the former United States Minister to Czecho-Slovakia and Mrs. Wilbur J. Carr have received word that the popular couple will sail for this country in September and will be in their Washington home for the autumn season. They are now on their way to Paris, after visiting in Italy and Switzerland.

Designed to permit world-weary statesmen to relax, the parties have been of an informal nature. Oregonian Blames Unemployment for Bills Barring Work For Married Women

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

The depression and attendant unemployment were blamed by Mrs. Dorothy Sanford Wilson, retiring president of the Woman's Professional League, of Portland, Oreg., for the crop of discriminatory bills in State legislatures this year, designed to limit the right of married women to work. The league was formed in Portland seven years ago by married women in the professions and in executive positions, with purpose of combating such legislation.

Mrs. Wilson came to Washington to speak at the public meeting being sponsored tomorrow night by the National Woman's Party in the garden of Alva Belmont House, celebrating Women's Independence Day, and is spending a few days at the historic residence, now the Woman's Party headquarters.

The drawing room, where she sat, furnished in antiques and with busts of Susan B. Anthony, Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton, suggested the long years of the struggle for woman suffrage and the progress since the first woman's rights convention in Seneca Falls, N. Y., July 19, 1848. Like all women of the modern era interested in keeping the rights already attained, Mrs. Wilson warned that consatnt vigilance was the price of their preservation.

Praises Legislature In Oregon

In Oregon, a bill was introduced in the last legislature providing that no husband and wife should both be employed by the State government where their combined salaries exceeded $150. The Legaue of Women Voters, Federation of Women's Clubs, with which the League of Professional Women is affiliated, and the Oregon Branch of the American Association of University Women all joined with the league in protesting against it.

"But our Oregon legislators are so intelligent, the protest was hardly necessary," said Mrs. Wilson. "The bill never got out of committee. One of our leading women, a member of the faculty of the State university, declared that, when the country sees fit to limit every family to an income of $150, regardless of size or number of dependents, then we shall be ready for such legislation."

The league acts as the "watchdog" on all State legislation affecting the status of women, education and public welfare, and has the active co-operation of other groups in opposing whatever is considered contrary to public good. Every bill it has opposed so far has been defeated.

Mrs. Wilson, on retirement from the presidency after two years in office, was appointed national legislative chairman and is also chairman of extension and club service for the Portland Federation of Women's Clubs. She comes of a family of feminists, her grandmother having been first secretary of the first Woman Suffrage Party in Oregon. She recalls vividly as a student at Dana Hall, attending a torchlight meeting in Wellesley, Mass., addressed by Emmeline Pankhurst.

Mrs. Babcock Recalls Campaign

Mrs. Caroline Lexow Babcock, acting as hostess at Alva Belmont House during the absence of Miss Martha Souder, who is in charge of the Woman's Party headquarters at the New York World's Fair, exclaimed with delight as Mrs. Wilson told of the incident. Mrs. Babcock, a native of New York, was among the young suffrage workers actively associated with Mrs. Pankhurst during her visit to this country at that time.

Mrs. Wilson, who is a diagnostician in the Child Study Department of the Portland public schools, will return home by way of New Orleans after another visit in New York and a short stay with friends in Virginia. She came here from New York, having made the trip East by the northern route and sailed from Montreal to Bermuda and back before coming to the Capital.

70,000 Copies in Second Edition Of School Directory Nearly Gone

Work, Sponsored by Post, A.E.A., Listing Educational and Recreational Facilities, Enjoys Wide Popularity and Heavy Demand

If any Washingtonians are feeling sorry for themselves because they had no opportunity to learn art or music, languages, handicrafts or a hundred and one other things when they were young, it's high time they cheered up and opened the door to opportunities at hand.

The second edition—70,000 copies—of The Post's Educational and Recreational Directory was recently issued and all but 2,000 have been distributed. In it, carefully classified, are listed facilities for education in everything from accounting to zoology. There is something to learn under every letter of the alphabet but "X" and nobody, apparently, teaches the xylophone alone. Opportunities for recreation range from archery, through boxing, bridge, camping, dancing, fishing, golf, handicrafts, etc., to visits to the zoo.

Cost, if Any, Given

The directory includes necessary information as to whether the project is free and, if not, gives the cost and states other requirements. There are 16 pages full of suggestions for educational work and for play.

The Adult Education Association prepared the material and The Post published it as a service to the thousands of residents in the Capital, many employed by the Government, who seek to make good use of their leisure time. The directories have all been given without charge.

Miss Maude E. Aiton, head of the Americanization School, was responsible for reviving the Adult Education Association, which had been inactive for some time. With Mrs. George Barnes Galloway, she conceived the plan of compiling the directory. Mrs. Galloway was chairman of the committee on research. Other members were Miss Mary Edith Coulson, of the Council of Social Agencies; Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, Miss Jessie M. Robbins, of the National Education Association; Mrs. Helen Steinbarger, of the Public Library; Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, of the public school system, and Chester S. Williams, of the Office of Education, who acted in an advisory capacity.

N. E. A. Gives Office Space

The National Education Association co-operated by giving office space and in making available the services of Miss Robbins to supervise the actual preparation of the directory. The orientation group of the D. C. Voteless League of Women Voters assisted in the work of compilation, as did Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, of the Community Center, and Miss Sibyl Baker, playground director.

The three months required for preparation of the directory would have been extended to a much longer period had it not been for the lists of recreational and other activities provided by the WPA, by Miss Coulson, Mrs. Steinbarger and Mrs. Marguerite Zapoleon, of the D. C. Employment Center.

Copies of the directory were sent to WPA directors throughout the country and to adult education associations, and have been provided in large quantities to Government departments, which have made them available to employes. The first edition of 17,000 was exhausted in no time and the second issue of 70,000 copies is almost gone. The directories which remain are available at the American Association of University Women, the Y. W. C. A., Y. M. C. A., the Public Library and at several leading hotels.

Association Gratified

The Adult Education Association is thoroughly gratified at the success of its first year's project, promoted with The Post's co-operation.

The association officers include J. Orin Powers, president; Mrs. Coyle, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mary Dent and Mr. Williams, vice presidents; Mrs. Galloway, corresponding secretary; James E. Cummings, recording secretary; Mrs. Elizabeth C. Draper, treasurer; Miss Aiton, chairman of membership, and Mrs. Chester Williams, chairman of the executive committee.

To Address Zonta Club

Mrs. Helen Steinbarger, of the Public Library, will speak tomorrow at the weekly luncheon of the Zonta Club. She will review books on successful women, who have contributed to the world's enjoyment. Miss Mary Wright Sigman, Zonta president, will preside.

New Chairmen Named

James J. Corbett, newly elected president of the Curley Club, has appointed the following chairmen to serve during the coming year:

Roland J. Hyland, executive committee; Miss Gretchen Baden, audit; Robert T. Horner, membership; Miss Mildred Mattimore, initiation; Miss Dorothy E. Barrett, entertainment; Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, dramatic; William J. Boyd, athletic; Miss Gertrude Connor, publicity; Miss Mary V. McKay, welfare; Miss Frances O'Shea, reception; Miss Julia Samber, chronicle, and Miss Edythe Connor, honorary membership.

Two D. C. Women Win Offices in Alpha Zeta Beta

Two national offices in Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority came to Washington members at the annual convention just closed at Salt Lake City. Miss Clara Dikeman was unanimously re-elected chaplain-historian and Mrs. Mildred Robeson, of Beta Psi Chapter was elected national treasurer.

Miss Dikeman was general chairman of the national convention when it was held here last summer at the Wardman Park Hotel. Mrs. Leila Lea Crevolin, of San Marino, Calif., who was elected president at that time, was unanimously re-elected at Salt Lake, as was Mrs. Wilma Wright, of San Diego, vice president.

Other officers are Miss Amy Starkweather, of Camden, N. J., secretary; Miss Helen Walker, also of Camden, editor. The mileage cup was awarded to Gamma Delta Chapter, of Camden, having the largest delegation, coming the greatest distance.

Most of the convention delegates went from Salt Lake (hotter than Washington, according to letters from the local delegates) to Yellowstone Park. The eighteenth national convention next year will be held in Indianapolis.

Members of Bethesda Woman's Club Are Spending Vacations in Many Different Places, Doing Many Varied Things

If the Bethesda Woman's Club has a meeting this fall devoted to vacation experiences of its members, there will be plenty of variety in the program. Here are some notes on the goings and comings:

Mrs. Charles I. Corby has returned to her home on Rockville Pike after spending the winter in Miami Beach, Fla., and the past month in the Hawaiian Islands.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan I. McKeithen and children, Jean and Dan, jr., of Battery Lane, returned last week-end from North and South Carolina, where they spent two weeks.

Mrs. Kenneth Newton and children, of Cedar Lane, is in New England spending the summer with her parents.

Mrs. John Mader, of Bradley boulevard has returned from a week in New York, where she visited the Fair.

Mrs. Frederick O. Smith and Capt. Smith, of Wilson Lane, are at their cottage at Fairview Beach, Chesapeake Bay, for the summer.

Miss Doree G. Holman, of Montgomery avenue, has as her guest Miss Ada Chapman, of Clarksdale, Miss.

Mr. and Mrs. Manning Dyer, of South Brook Lane, have just returned from Harrisonburg, Va., where they were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. David W. Bell.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Syme, of Forty-fifth street, Chevy Chase, and son, Samuel, jr., are visiting Mrs. Syme's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Charles, in London, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cassey, of Leland street, spent the week-end with friends on South River, in southern Maryland. Miss Marjorie Cassey left with friends last week for a boat trip to Florida.

And, just to "keep the home fires burning," Mrs. Hugh Johnston, chairman of fine arts for the Bethesda Club, last week entertained members of her committee with a luncheon at her home on Conduit road. The guests included Mrs. Louis A. Gravelle, president; Mrs. Ernest Offutt, Mrs. Cassey, Mrs. James Hammond and Mrs. J. Reed Bradley.

THE WASHINGTON Chapter of Hadassah is another organization which does not let the summer heat interfere with its active program. Mrs. Moe Offenberg, newly-elected president, has announced a member-bring-a-member luncheon for Wednesday, July 26, at 12:30 on the lawn at the home of Mrs. I. S. Turover, 3909 Jocelyn street.

The admission for every member is a new member. Mrs. Joseph Dessoff and Mrs. Maurice Eanet are in charge of reservations and Mrs. David Kushner, chairman of general arrangements. After the luncheon there will be bridge and mah jong.

Wallace Hits Water-Carrier Regulation Bill

Says Plan Would Mean High Rail Rates At Farmers' Expense

By the Associated Press

Secretary Wallace, in a strongly-worded settlement, contended yesterday that pending legislation to bring water carriers under Federal control would not solve the Nation's transportation problem.

Wallace's remarks, contained in a letter to Speaker Bankhead, were called to the attention of the House by Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, head of a ten-man group opposed to any change in the status of water carriers.

Sees Cartel in Prospect

The Secretary's letter said in part:

"The advocacy of thorough regulation of the minimum rates of motor and water carriers by a centralized agency appears to represent an attempt to use Government power to bring competing transportation agencies into a cartel, and, in this manner to share traffic and adjust rates in such a way as to earn a return upon all transportation capital of these agencies.

"Hence, an umbrella would be held over the inefficient plant and the present high rail rate level would be protected from the impact of vigorous competition."

Wallace told Bankhead he wrote the letter because of the authority in existing law for his department to look into matter relating to the Interstate Commerce Commission which affect the farmer.

Might Victimize Farmers

"While I believe that maintenance of the controls now provided over railroad rates is justified by economic considerations, I have grave doubts that identical rate regulation is required of the rail competitors," Wallace said.

"It may be argued that the water carriers are subsidized and, therefore, that their competition with the railroads is not fair or economic. If this be true, the logic of the situation suggests making changes in our promotional policies with respect to transportation."

Statements by railroads, he added, indicated to hi mthat those carriers desire to solve their difficulties at the expense of agricultural and other shippers, consumers and taxpayers."

Train Hits Auto Car, Truck Crash; Total Dead, 10

Joliet, Ill., July 17 (AP).—Five persons, four of one family, were killed today when a St. Louis-bound Alton Railroad train hit a bus near Elwood.

The victims were A. J. Gadberry, 65, driver of the bus; his son, Ray, 35; Ray's wife and their 5-year-old daughter, Peggy, and Miss Bertha McQueen, 65, of Wilmington, Ill.

Five in Family Killed

Kalamazoo, Mich., July 17 (AP).—Five members of a Kalamazoo family were killed near here today in an automobile-truck collision.

The dead were Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Remington, their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Remington, and Roberta Kurtz, 21-month-old granddaughter of the Floyd Remingtons. Leonard Remington, 14, son of Floyd, suffered fractures of both legs.

Outbreak of 80 cases of smallpox in New York City constitutes a "definite menace" to Washingtonians, Dr. James G. Cumming, director of the Bureau of Preventable Diseases, declared last night.

Due to travel caused by the World's Fair, diseases in one city have an especially close relationship to those in another this summer, Dr. Cumming said. He advised vaccination for all "who plan to travel."

Washington has not had a case of smallpox in eight years.

Rowan to Get Cuban Medal After 41 Years

MAJ. ANDREW S. ROWAN
The Hero, 41 Years Ago

Congress Gives Special Grant to Hero of 'Message to Garcia'

Maj. Andrew S. Rowan, the man who "carried the message to Garcia" 41 years ago, is to be honored by the nation he helped to free.

The hero of Elbert Hubbard's famous true story of a daring expedition through enemy lines at the opening of the Spanish-American War is authorized to accept the Cuban decoration Order Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, by a special act signed by President Roosevelt yesterday.

Was Lieutenant Then

Now 82 and living in retirement in San Francisco, Rowan could not accept the award previously because of the constitutional ban against Army officers receiving foreign honors.

Maj. Rowan was a lieutenant in April, 1898, when selected by President McKinley to attempt to get into Cuba, pierce the Spanish lines and make contact with the leader of the revolutionary Cuban forces. His success in reaching the Cuban General Garcia, disguised as a native, and bringing out secret information, has been told and retold on printed page, stage and screen.

Secrets of Great Value

His own Government honored his "extraordinary heroism" with the Distinguished Service Cross, the citation of which declared that the information he brought back was of "such great value that it had an important bearing on the quick ending of the struggle and the complete success of the United States Army."

Knife-Bearing Tree Fails as Alibi

Discovery of a natural phenomenon—a tree that grows knives—was revealed in Police Court yesterday, but brought only a $25 fine to its discoverer.

James V. Linley, colored, of 617 L street northwest, was on trial charged with carrying a deadly weapon. He was arrested Wednesday by Second Precinct Patrolman John Rice, who saw Linley acting suspiciously. He found a wicked-looking Bowie knife in a sheathe at his belt.

Linley testified he had no ulterior motive in carrying the knife; he said he had "found" it while bicycling around the Speedway. He said he rode under a tree and was struck on the head by the knife which was suspended from a branch.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge John P. McMahon said he had heard of trees that bore fruit, but none bearing knives.

1,500 Join Fight to Alter Neutrality Act

Throng Denounces Congress for Letting 'U. S. Participate in Japan's War Guilt'

The grand ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel, framed with enough placards and bunting for a major political convention, last night held a militant crowd of 1,500, gathered to "express the people's indignation" at Congressional failure to revise the neutrality act.

With repeated volleys of applause the throng pledged itself to crusade for repeal of the mandatory arms embargo and an end to "America's participation in Japan's war guilt."

Sharing hisses with Reichsfuehrer Hitler were Prime Minister Chamberlain, Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin.

Fears Axis Domination

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, in a frank appeal for legislation to strengthen the hand of France and Britain in the present crisis, painted a somber picture of world affairs if this country fails to take speedy and decisive action in defense of the existing "balance of power."

The Foreign Relations Committee member saw as "shocking," and "by no means remote" possibilities:

Defeat of Great Britain in a new European war and disappearance of the British fleet.

Germany dominant in Europe, "looking with greedy eyes across the Atlantic at South America."

Japan commanding the Pacific "from the Aleutian Islands to Australia."

"Can any sane man doubt," he aksed, "that America would then have to turn its whole economy into a war economy, undergoing regimentation as strict as that of any European nation today, with every resource taxed to meet the demands of defense and security?"

Might Surpass United States

"It is altogether conceivable that a combination of the two powers might surpass our own in strength," he added.

Enactment of the Administration proposal for cash-and-carry arms sales in time of war would be a powerful force for peace in Europe, he declared. "If there is a war in Europe we may stay out of it," he said. "If there is no war we know we will stay out."

Holds Congress Responsible

Senator Pepper warned his colleagues that the Seventy-sixth Congress bears a "fateful responsibility" for which "the American people will some day demand an accounting."

Another personal appeal to Congress was voiced by Dr. Arthur O. Lovejoy, professor emeritus of philosophy from Johns Hopkins University, who led a delegation from Baltimore. White-haired himself, Dr. Lovejoy said, "we have a right to expect the Senators—even those who are elderly gentlemen—to keep on the job until this vital issue is settled."

The mass meeting was sponsored by the Washington committee to revise the neutrality act.

Post Staff Photos.

Stage conscious young Washingtonians with the desire to "trod the boards" in their hearts, gave "their all" last night in the opening audition of the "Go Native" review on an improvised stage in the Willard Hotel. Two of the hundreds, who think their talent is worthy of an audience, were Jeanne Holmes (left) a toe dancer from the heart. Doris Gene Isbell (right) hopes the judges will select her to tap dance in the review which is to be staged at the Capitol Theater

U. S. Probes Plea Aukam's Too Severe

Man Fined $10 for Missing Jury Call Quizzed by Justice Department Agents

A $10 fine for contempt of court, imposed by Presiding Judge George C. Aukam, of Municipal Court, has been made the subject of careful investigation by the Justice Department, it was disclosed yesterday.

The four-year term of Judge Aukam, as well as those of Municipal Judges Nathan Cayton and Ellen K. Raedy, expire tomorrow.

Changed Story, Says Clerk

Complaint of undue severity on the part of Judge Aukam was made by Charles H. Kendall, of 27 W street northwest, who was held in contempt of court when he failed to answer a jury summons June 1.

Kendall maintains that he was out of town, resting under doctor's orders, when the summons reached his home. When advised that Judge Aukam took a serious view of his failure to appear, Kendall made four trips to the court to explain his absence, offering to produce witnesses as to his health, he told The Post.

Accordin gto Miss Blanche Neff, clerk of the Municipal Court, Kendall "first said he was out of town and then claimed he was sick." The fine was paid June 16.

Complained of Before

Department of Justice agents have since questioned Kendall several times and have interviewed his employer, Charles P. L. Moran, manager of the Crane plumbing concern, 1125 I street northwest.

Judge Aukam, who is 67, has served on Municipal Court since its creation in 1909. When his previous term expired in 1935, two local attorneys appeared before the Senate Judiciary committee to complain of what they called the "rude and high-handed" manner of the jurist.

Takoma Park Reinstates Earl Thomas

Ex-Policeman's Friends Turn Council Meeting Into Bedlam

Earl Thomas, popular Takoma Park policeman, whose dismissal, three weeks ago, brought more than 200 irate citizens to the monthly meeting of the Mayor and Town Council last night in protest, was reistated at the end of the evening by a vote of four councilmen to two.

A new position was created for Thomas, who becomes chief of the police station with the rank of sergeant, increasing the town police force from three men to four. Earl Thomas and his cousin, Al Thomas, were dropped from the rolls at the end of June and given two month's extra pay but no notice or explanation, they said.

Meeting a Bedlam

Action was taken by a roll call vote of the whole council, after the policemen's irate friends, including State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson, former Mayor Frederick L. Lewton and some councilmen who had not been present when the earlier decision was made, had told the council in no uncertain terms of their displeasure.

The usually quiet meeting at the fire house, which normally attracts a bare half dozen spectators, was a bedlam of cheers, boos, applause and hisses while the debate raged.

Mayor John R. Adams, who had cast the deciding vote against reappointing the two men, was quoted in a letter from Takoma Park Post of the American Legion as saying "he did not like Earl Thomas." No other reason for his vote was given, according to the Legion letter, which was read at the meeting.

Fair Deal Demanded

Councilman Philip W. Huck was greeted with boos when he asked if every town employe had to be reappointed every year. "If a man has served seven years and been reappointed seven times, why not an eighth time?" retorted Albert B. Ground amid cheers from the citizens.

Harry Millard, of Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 350, demanded that Thomas be given a "fair deal," and F. Byrne Austin, secretary to Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, declared that "these men as citizens deserve to know why they were fired."

When State's Attorney Wilkinson asked whether the men would have been dismissed if a full meeting of the Council had considered their case, Mayor Adams replied that all members had been notified. "That's not true," shouted Councilman A. L. Conger, and when the shouts had died down, explained he had known of the meeting but not of the subject to be discussed.

Three Others Speak

Among other speakers were Mrs. Rose Rutledge, William Ford, and George B. Kissinger, commander of the American Legion Post.

Capital News In Brief

'Volunteer' Fireman?

A thief with a unique hobby—or maybe it's his professional specialty—yesterday stole three fire extinguishers from an apartment house at 1637 Eleventh street northwest.

A second thief—possibly a coin collector—took 150 dimes and pennies from the apartment of Bowman Porter, 1626 Sixteenth street northwest. Holston T. Dixon, of the same address, reported he was victimized to the extent of 20 Jefferson nickels.

Six Woodsheds Burn

Ronald Goes Exploring

Three-year-old Ronald Anderson, of 325 Decatur street northwest, yesterday took his first plunge at adventure—he crossed the street by himself, and with a little friend went to explore the alleys on the other side. When his mother discovered the child's absence, she enrolled the neighborhood children in to a searching party which found Ronald before police could offer their help.

Poetry Loses Charm

Miami, Fla., July 17 (U.P.).—Mrs. W. L. Levy, of Washington, charged in a petition for divorce today that her husband recited poetry to her until the early hours of morning. She said she could not doze off because he made her recite the last stanzas afterward.

Herman was hurled from the motorcycle, carried under Smith's automobile and tangled in its rear axle.

Senate Votes Revised D. C. Revenue Bill

Fate of Measure Rests With House; Nichols To Present Report

With its fate dependent upon the whims of the membership, the District revenue bill conference report will be called up in the House today by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma. The report was adopted without dissent yesterday by the Senate.

Nichols filed the report in the House shortly after the Senate had acted and said he will call it up today at the first opportunity. Although he did not sign it, Nichols said he will not speak against its adoption.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, explained the changes in the tax bill briefly to the Senate before asking for its approval.

The principal alteration, he said, was to lower the lump sum authorization from $6,500,000 to $6,000,000 ot make it conform with the agreement reached last week by the conferees on the District supply bill.

Another revision was the elimination of a provision setting up a special committee to make a new study of District taxes.

The House last week rejected the first tax conference report largely because of its objection to a $6,500,000 lump sum authorization, which members declared was written so as to constitute an appropriation.

Appropriation Not Compulsory

Even though the House adopts the revenue bill, which makes the $6,000,000 authorization permanent, there is no assurance that the House will appropriate that much as a Federal contribution next year.

Under rules of the House the Appropriation Committee is not bound to follow strictly the action of the House in authorizing an appropriation. The 60-40 authorization law, for instance, was on the statute books for more than a decade, during which time it was ignored.

Last week a few members asked questions about the revised District income tax proposed in the revenue bill, but the majority appeared content in that it definitely does not apply to members of Congress or legislative employes who keep their reseidences in the States.

Limited to persons "domiciled" in the District on the last day of the taxable year, the levy is payable next March and applies to income earned in the calendar year 1939 or, in the cases of businesses, to the fiscal year that ends in 1939.

The rate begins at 1 per cent above the Federal exemptions of $2,500 and $1,000 for married and single persons, and jumps one-half of 1 per cent on each $5,00 of net income until it reaches 3 per cent.

The measure freezes the realty and personal property tax rate at $1.75.

Astrologist Here Sees Change In Government Policies in 1942

Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus to Bring About 'Fuller Expression of Individual Liberty in 1943;' Also Greater Prosperity

When Earnest A. Grant cocks an eye at a planet he thinks of such things as national politics and economic conditions in America.

GRANT

Grant, a past and present president of the American Federation of Scientific Astrologers and present president of the Washington Astrological Association, is an astrologer "by avocation" and he hates fortune tellers, whom he calls "charlatans" because they lower the standards of his hobby.

Sharp Change in 1942.

With the aid of accurate astronomical data about the planets Jupiter, Saturn and Uranus, he yesterday predicted that a sharp change in governmental policies would come about in 1942; that Americans would in 1943 or 1944 begin to realize "a fuller expression of individual liberty," and that the next administration will bring with it "greater financial security for the man who produces."

Jupiter, he said, is the planet of finance and represents the Republican Party. "Saturn is the teacher, signifying restriction," he claimed, indicating that it represents the Democratic Party. He went on to say that "Uranus is the star of sudden action." When he speaks to the Mississippi Young Democrats at 9:15 p. m. tomorrow at the Raleigh Hotel he promises to explain the full significance of these planets for the next administration.

Every 20 years, he said, Jupiter and Saturn form a straight line with the earth. "This conjunction exercises a great magnetic pull," he believes, stating that every time it has occurred since the "Great Mutation" in 1842, governmental policies were severely altered.

Liberty Equals Money

In addition Grant described an 84-year cycle that corresponds to the revolution of the planet Uranus and affects individual liberty. He pointed out that Uranus will again reach this "vital position" in 1943 or 1944.

Asked how he could predict prosperity in the next administration, Grant replied that the "measure of liberty today is the amount of money a man has in his pocket. So obviously if we are to have greater freedom for the individual in the next few years the individual will have to have more money."

By this time this reporter's face was covered with perspiration. "This heat is nothing," said Grant. "Next week the Atlantic seaboard will be the hottest in the last 15 years, for on July 27 Mars will reach its closest position to the earth."

Donovan Wins Temporary Writ In Parole Fight

James F. Donovan, who claims the Board of Indeterminate Sentence and Parole has made his 10-year sentence for robbery a vehicle for persecuting him, won fredom on $400 bond yesterday pending hearing next Monday on his petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Donovan was sentenced May 13, 1932, and paroled in 1934 to work on a chicken farm in Flora, Ind. He claims the Ku Klux Klan ran him out of Flora, but that he was a peaceful resident of South Bend until the board sent him back to Lorton, because it was stung by newspaper criticism of laxity in granting clemency.

Attorney James J. Laughlin had a habeas corpus action for Donovan under way when he was released Monday, July 10, to take a job at Blue Plains. Four days later Donovan was rearrested on the claim he violated his parole by leaving Blue Plains at night. Donovan completed his sentence last January and has been unlawfully confined since then. Justice Morris granted a temporary writ and set next Monday for hearing on making it permanent.

D. C. Baptists Are Hosts to 24 Europeans

Delegation on Way To World Alliance Convention at Atlanta

En route to the Baptist World Alliance convention in Atlanta, Ga., two dozen European members of the denomination arrived last night at Union Station for a three-day stopover as guests of local Baptists.

Representing England, Scotland, Wales, Poland, Finland—and even Burma—they came later in the day to the First Baptist Church, where their leader, Dr. T. G. Dunning, of London, director of youth work for the Baptist World Alliance, greeted the audience at the monthly meeting of the District Baptist Student Union

Dr. Dunning, who will join with British delegates in paying respects at the British Embassy this morning, said after the meeting that, in the face of the present war crisis in Europe, the morale of British youth was holding up "remarkably well."

War fears, he emphasized, were making a much more serious-thinking generation of young people, who, rather than becoming fatalistic in the face of such a crisis, were working harder than ever to promote good will between England and other nations.

While most of England's youth regarded Chamberlain's move at Munich a "heroic thing" at the outset, he said, they likewise shared the Prime Minister's changed attitude when they realized Germany had betrayed England.

Characterizing England's present state as a "war of nerves," Dr. Dunning expressed the conviction that the democracies are better able to stand both "wars of arms" and "wars of nerves." He said he felt a sense of relief in arriving in America, where no "trenches were being built, or gasmask drills held."

Dr. Dunning, who was introduced by Haley Scurlock, president of the local Baptist Student Union, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, 3207 Nineteenth street northwest, First Baptist parishioners.

Chiozza Breaks Leg as Cards Defeat Giants, 4-3

Diz Shows 'Mysterious' Cut

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Dean, Home, Denies Wild Stories of Brawl

Diz Insists He Cut Arm Reaching for Phone; Examination Reveals Wound Is Superficial; Whitehill, Another Cub Hurler, Breaks Thumb

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—Dizzy Dean came home today to puncture all those wild stories about his cut left arm, explaining the wound was the result, of all things, of a midnight telephone call from Brother Paul, St. Louis Cardinals pitcher.

Sent home Sunday after Gabby Hartnett, Chicago Cub manager, discovered the injury, Dean and his wife, Patricia, hopped off the train this afternoon somewhat amazed at the mystery and conflicting rumors caused by the wound.

"Why, this is the silliest thing I ever heard of," he told the swarm of baseball writers at the station. "Boys, you'll laugh your heads off when you get a look at this scratch on my arm.

Dizzy's return was not explained by club officials in New York, where the Cubs, already handicapped by injuries to other players, are on a road trip.

Denies Brawl

"Fight? There wasn't any fight. And I wasn't drinking either. It happened right in the hotel. We went to our room at about 11:15 o'clock (Saturday night). We were in bed when the phone rang, and, like a dummy instead of turning the light on first I made a grab for the phone in the dark.

"I knocked over the lamp on the stand between the twin beds. In trying to grab it I scraped my arm against the corner of a glass top bedstand. My brother, Paul, who was in town with the Cards, was the guy who was calling, doggone him."

Someone suggested there had been reports of a domestic squabble but Dean retorted his wife "has better control that that; if she was throwin' anything, it would have been a beanball, sure."

Superficial Wound

Dr. John F. Davis, Cugs' physician, said that after examing the arm that "it's just a superficial wound. At the deepest point it isn't more than one-fourth inch deep. In fact, he could go out there and pitch today." Dr. Davis added Dean's explanation was logical and that the wound could have been made in that manner.

Dean said all the furore would have been missed if Hartnett had allowed him to go to the doubleheader at Brooklyn Sunday.

"I guess I'm just in the doghouse," he added, gloomily.

The big right-hander who has been an in-and-outer this season did not talk with Cubs owner, Phil Wrigley today. He expects to remain at home until the Cubs return from their eastern trip.

Whitehill Suffers A Broken Thumb

New York, July 17 (AP).—A second Chicago Cubs pitcher, veteran Earl Whitehill, followed Dizzy Dean back to Chicago today, suffering with a broken thumb on his left, pitching, hand.

Whitehill, former American leaguer, who is 39 years old, was injured during batting practice in Philadelphia three days ago, but didn't have the hand x-rayed until last night. The pictures revealed the fracture.

Louis, Pastor Fight Sept. 20

20-Round Bout Will Be Longest Since 1919

By the United Press.

Detroit, July 17.—Joe Louis comes home to fight on September 20, in a 20-round bout with Bob Pastor of New York, which will be the longest heavyweight battle since the memorable fight in Toledo July 4, 1919, when Jack Dempsey took the title from Jess Willard.

The bout, announced by Promoter Mike Jacobs, is Louis' first in his native Detroit since he rose from the golden gloves ranks to heavyweight champion and the second title bout in Michigan's history. It will be held in Briggs Stadium, the home of the Detroit Tigers. Jacobs flew to Detroit today to complete technical arrangements and to negotiate with Walter (Spike) Briggs, jr., for rental of the Tigers' Park, second-largest in the American League and one of the best baseball plants in the country.

Louis and Pastor will sign officially for the fight next Wednesday, Jacobs said.

Jacobs left tonight for Philadelphia to complete arrangements for the Tony Galento-Lou Nova fight there in the fall. He said he would return here Wednesday with Pastor and his manager, Jimmy Johnston.

Bump Allows 5 Hits for 8th Victory

Feller Loses Fourth Game of Season; Hadley Scatters 5 Hits Over 4 Innings

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, July 17.—Though he struck out nine of them in the first six innings, the World Champion Yankees got to Bob Feller twice when it counted today and, behind the 5-hit shutout pitching of their own Bump Hadley, whipped Feller and the Indians, 3-0. The triumph gave the Yankees a sweep of the three-game series.

With Hadley scattering the Indians' safeties, four of them singles, over four innings, and giving only two bases on balls to Feller's four, the Yanks didn't need to unleash their customary dynamite. They got the winning run in the fifth, when George Selkirk walked, took second on a wild pitch, and scored on Babe Dahlgren's single to center, and then salted the game away in the seventh.

Hadley opened this frame with a two-bagger along the left-field foul line. He went to third while Frank Crosetti was being retired, and then ambled across the plate on Red Rolfe's screaming three-bagger to left. Tom Henrich rapped a single to the same sector to score Rolfe with the final run.

Hadley, in winning his eighth game against only two defeats, got in hot water in the second but had enough on the ball to pull himself out of it. With one out, Jeff Heath doubled to left and went to third as Ken Keltner beat out a hit to Crosetti. At that point Hadley bore down, got Oscar Grimes on a strikeout, and then threw out Jimmy Webb.

Feller was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the eighth after giving up six of the Yanks' seven hits. It was his fourth defeat against 14 victories.

Stanford Track Coach Expected To Resign Soon

Palo Alto, Calif., July 17 (AP).—Resignation of Robert Lyman (Dink) Templeton as track and field coach of Stanford University was believed imminent today although Templeton was not available for comment.

Dr. Thomas Storey, director of physical education at the university, asserted Templeton had discussed resignation July 3.

"I told Templeton to give the matter serious consideration before making any move," Dr. Storey said. "We would like to have him stay on the job."

Templeton, former athletic star at the university, and its coach for 20 years, enjoys national renown. His teams have won many national championships and he developed such world and national record breakers as Ben Eastman, Eric Krenz, Harlow Rothert, John Lyman, Phil Levy and Bob King.

Friends expressed belief if he withdrew from the coaching field he would become a newspaper sports writer.

Bitsy Grant Match Reset for Sunday

The tennis exhibition scheduled at the Rock Creek Courts Saturday between Bitsy Grant and the best available opponent has been postponed until Sunday, the general committee announced yesterday.

The postponment was caused, it is believed, by the uncertainty that either Barney Welsh or Gil Hunt would be able to play Saturday and the committee's failure to procure another outstanding player as a substitute.

Welsh is playing in the West Virginia Amateur Championships and Hunt in the Longwood Bowl Invitational tournament this week.

Lou Collides With Moore Chasing Fly

Veteran Utility Infielder Receives Double Fracture; 2 Other Mishaps

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 17.—The Giants, their infield already crippled by the ten-day suspension of Shortstop Billy Jurges, sustained another blow today when Lou Chiozza, No. 1 utility man, was carried off the field with a broken leg in the ninth inning of the St. Louis Cardinals' 4-3 victory over the Terrymen.

Chiozza, at shortshop in Jurges' place, went racing back into short leftfield to take a high fly hit by Pitcher Clyde Shoun, first man up for the Cards in the ninth. At the same time Leftfielder Joe Moore came tearing in for the ball. Chiozza got it for the putout, but a second later the two teammates collided.

Rused to Hospital

Moore was able to finish the game, but Chiozza was rushed off the field on a stretcher and taken to the hospital.

After a preliminary examination, Dr. Carl Palmer announced that Chiozza "definitely is out for the rest of the year."

"I don't want to say too much before taking X-rays," Dr. Palmer continued, "but after examining him tonight I'm almost sure both bones of the left leg are fractured. There does not appear to be a compound fracture, but I see no possibility of his being able to play again this season. The leg has been put in a cast, and X-rays will be taken tomorrow."

The Cardinals won the game in the first three innings when they tagged Hal Schumacher for seven hits and all of their runs. The Giants came back to get three tallies off Curt Davis in the seventh, but with two out and the tying and winning runs on base, Shoun replaced Davis and got Moore on an outfield fly.

Two Other Accidents

Two minor accidents preceded the Chiozza-Moore collision. Jim Ripple hurt his shoulder in missing a shoestring catch on Terry Moore's liner in the third, and Ducky Medwick had to retire after being hit on the leg by one of Manuel Salvo's pitches in the fifth.

Before the game, the Giants also lost Catcher Harry Danning, who went to the same hospital Chiozza later was taken to for treatment of an infection on his left leg.

The infection traces back to the Giants' second home game of the season, when Danning hit a ball that bounced off his leg and all the way out to third base. He had been bothered by the bruise ever since and today, when it developed he had a fast pulse and was running a temperature, Dr. Palmer decided it would be "best to get him off his feet."

Dr. Palmer said Danning was resting comfortably tonight, but that he'd have to stay in the hospital for anywhere from two to four days. Chiozza, too, after coming out of the anesthetic, was doing as well as could be expected.

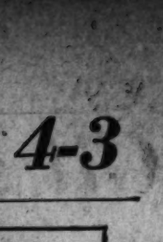
This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Virginia Beach, Va., July 17.—If you want to know what the wild waves are saying, you might put the question to Clark Griffith. He's down here where the ocean is frothing at the mouth of the bay and the venerable 69-year-old owner of the Nats is being slapped around by the surf and liking it, no less than he is disliking the manner in which his ball club is being slapped around in the American League.



POVICH

But by this time the old gentleman is pretty well reconciled to the twin facts that he is no improvement on King Canute and that his ball club is doomed to the second division. As far as the Nats present position is concerned, Griffith is the most unsurprised man in the world.

Last spring, for the first time in his 28 years as boss of the Washington Club, Griffith made no pennant claims, apparently he foresaw that his Nats would be no pennant factor. He clambered out of the surf this afternoon, stretched himself lazily on the sand and reminded your correspondent:

"I kept saying last winter that this 1939 team of mine would get worse before it gets better. A young team always does. I knew we'd look bad for long stretches, that our young team would make a lot of mistakes that would lose ball games. And that is what has been happening. But it will be a better ball team because of those mistakes.

"This is the second year of my accent-on-youth policy. A young team always takes three years to mature. Next season the fellows who have been making the mistakes this year will be the men who will take us up near the top. But next year it will still be a young team."

Combining Business With Pleasure

The old gentleman is combining business with his current vacation trip. He has been driving 50 to 100 miles a day to see a ball game daily, or nightly. What he has been doing is scouting his Charlotte club in the Piedmont League. There are young fellows with the Charlotte club whom Griffith thinks will fit in nicely with the Nats of 1940. The lad who is causing the most delightful visions to dance before the eyes of Griffith is the Charlotte catcher, Al Evans. Right now, Griffith is willing to wager that Evans will be the No. 1 catcher of the Washington club next year. And so will Calvin Griffith, the boss's adopted son, who is manager and president of the Charlotte branch.

Last season Griff refused the Boston Red Sox's offer of $25,000 for Jake Early because he thought Early would be his regular catcher this year, exclaimed Calvin. He saw Early catch a few games for Charlotte and liked his .320 batting average for the season. Well, Evans is a better catcher than Early was or ever will be, and he's a sure-shot to make it with Washington. All of which, if true, should embarrass both Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris and the Washington coaches not a little. Because for two seasons they had Evans in spring training at Orlando and gave him no more consideration than Hitler would give a visiting delegation from Palestine. They virtually shooed him out of camp.

According to young Griffith, Evans had no incentive to display his talents in Florida. It was easy for him to see that Jake Early was the darling of Griffith and Harris, and that he was being kept around only to handle the batting practice pitchers but once he got the regular job at Charlotte he began to act like the best young catcher I ever saw.

Another young man on the Charlotte club who will be given a long look when the Nats assemble at Orlando next spring is Second Baseman Morris Aderholt, the Wake Forest graduate who made a profound impression this year despite his greenness in Florida.

Three Replacements From Charlotte

Griffith is scarcely counting on 34-year-old Buddy Myer as his 1940 second baseman, and he is not overjoyed at the prospect of relying on Jimmy Bloodworth, either. A clever fielder, Bloodworth is shockingly slow on the bases, and is handicapped at bat by the distance of Griffith Stadium's fences. At Fenway Park, at Yankee Stadium, at Chicago or Detroit or St. Louis, Bloodworth would be a potent package with his long leftfield flies but at Griffith Stadium he is something of an all-American out.

This Aderholt, relates Griffith, can't help being a big leaguer. He's batting .315 now at Charlotte and he hits the ball a long way to all fields. He looks more like Charley Gehringer than any rookie infielder I ever saw. Perhaps he won't be ready next spring. But perhaps he will, it all depends on how fast he learns and he's a smart boy.

Washington's hopes for reinforcement from Charlotte total three. The third young man on the Charlotte club who may be seen in a Washington uniform next season is big Roberto Ortiz, the giant Cuban powerhouse.

But Ortiz, who received a terrific build-up as a pitcher last spring in the Nats' camp, is no longer a pitcher. Calvin Griffith thinks he's an outfielder and it will be as such that he will get another tryout with the Nats. The big fellow has been knocking down the fences in the Piedmont League with tremendous line drives and he is tolerable enough on the defense. At present, though, Ortiz is not playing ball for anybody. He's in a Charlotte hospital. Heads up baserunning put him there. He went into second base with his head up and was conked by the throw of the second baseman who was trying to complete a double play. The ball bounced off Ortiz's head all the way to the rightfield fence, and Ortiz bounced into the hospital with a dented, but not fractured skull. He'll be out soon.

Krakky Pitches Today as Nats Open Tiger Series

Chicago, July 16.—Rained out in their series final here today with the Chicago White Sox, the Washington Nationals moved to Detroit where tomorrow they open a three-game series with the fifth-place Tigers.

Joe Krakauskas and Schoolboy Rowe, two of the big mound disappointments of the season, with six victories and 18 defeats between them, are the respective pitching choices.

White Sox Owner, Seriously Ill, Is Given Oxygen

By the Associated Press

Eagle River, Wis., July 17.—Oxygen was being administered tonight to J. Louis Comiskey, president of the Chicago White Sox baseball club, critically ill since a cold developed into more serious complications last Friday.

Comiskey's attending physician, Dr. Russell Oldfield, reported tonight, however, that he was "brighter," and that there was "some hope."

Members of his family were at the bedside in the summer home where his father, Charles Comiskey, the "Old Roman," died October 28, 1931.

His condition was reported aggravated by heart trouble, with which he has been afflicted for several years. He has been under his physician's care constantly since 6 a. m. today, when he took a turn for the worse. He is 54.

Gil Hunt Leads Way Into Third Round of Longwood Play

D. C. Player Tops Kulick By 8-6, 7-5

Nine Defaults Upset Schedule; Many Aces Haven't Shown Up; Mulloy Is Victor

By the United Press.

Chestnut Hill, Mass., July 17.—Second-seeded Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., of Washington, D. C., led the field into the third round of the 47th Annual Lnogwood Bowl competition tonight in a tournament marred by defaults and the non-arrival of sedeed stars.

Gene Marko and Adrian Quist, of Australia, who were top-seeded respectively in the domestic and foreign lists, were expected to arrive late tonight for second-round matches after drawing byes in the opening round. Also expected were the Murphy twins, of Chicago, William, seeded No. 4, and Chet, No. 5; Quist's partner, John Crawford, second seeded foreigner, and John Doeg, of Rumford, N. J., No. 8.

The temperamental Hunt, ranked ninth nationally, eliminated Hendrick Kulick, of Salem, an unknown, in the feature second-round match after a stiff battle. Hunt, who, arrived late after a train ride from his home, was forced to dig deep in his bag of tricks to stop the accurate Kulick, 8-6, 7-5.

Nine Defaults

The tournament "dark horse," David Freeman, of Pasadena, Calif., top-ranking junior singles player, advanced to the third round by eliminating W. T. Cooke, Birmingham, England, 6—0, 6—3, and Jack Wendell, of Pottstown, Pa., 6—3, 6—4.

Although nine players defaulted, several at the last minute, President Irving Wright, of the Longwood Cricket Club, said he was satisfied with the field and that he would make "no official protest" to United States lawn tennis officials.

Gardnar Mulloy, University of Miami amateur tennis coach from Coral Gables, Fla., defeated Andy Bismarck, Boston College footballer, 6—2, 6—3, and George Lowman, of New Canaan, Conn., 6—0, 6—4.

Upsets Decrease Field

Two minor upsets further decreased the field competing for the title vacated by Bobby Riggs, of Chicago. Paul Guibord, of Melrose, No. 1 ranking New Englander, was eliminated in a second-round match, 6—3, 6—3, by Robert Low, Los Angeles, Calif. Bob Decker, Newton, Mass., State titlist, was put in another second-round match by George Pero, of the University of Miami.

Frank Parker, Pasadena, Calif., ranked No. 8, and Mako are the top-seeded domestic team in the doubles play which begins tomorrow, while Quist and Crawford lead the foreign list.

Helen Bernhard, of New York City, will open defense of her women's singles title tomorrow against a field which includes Helen Pedersen, of Stamford, Conn., ranked No. 8 last year; Virginia Wolfenden, of San Francisco, Calif., runner-up to Miss Bernhard and Katherine Winthrop, of Boston, ranked No. 10.

Midget Autos Race Tonight

Full Crowd Expected; First Race at 7:30

The peace and quiet around Bladensburg road and New York avenue northeast will be shattered tonight by the deep-throated roar of 18 bounding midget auto racers when the District's newest sport makes its debut on the newly born Capital speedway.

Eighteen drivers who defy death nightly in midget auto racing's Eastern Circuit will go into action as the first qualifying heat gets off at 7:30 o'clock. Gates to the quarter-mile track will be opened at 6 p. m. and Promoter Jimmy Frattone last night predicted a capacity crowd of 8,000.

Three trial heats, two semifinals, one consolation race and one grand finale will provide the thrills for the night. The drivers will be pushing their "hunks of iron" toward a $500 winner's purse in the feature event.

Charley Winnai, veteran of 13 Indianapolis races, and the only man to go over the wall there and live, will be driving a Rocker-Arm Dreyer Special tonight.

Other drivers who will be competing for the $1,000 total prize money include Len Volk, Duke Nalon, Harry Felton, Jimmy Forte, Ernie Wilson, Johnny Favinger, Cliff Hemingway, Charley Breslin and Red Redmond. Trials are expected to consume na hour, with the feature race getting off at 8:30 p. m. Ticket offices have been set up at the New York avenue-Bladensburg road junction.

Wiffy Cox Plays Washington in 66, Four Under Par

Wiffy Cox played at Washington Golf and Country Club yesterday, drove the green on two of the par four holes and took a bogey five on the eighteenth to finish with a 66, four under par. The Congressional mentor, who won the District Open over the course last fall, was playing with Mrs. Myron Davy.

Mrs. Davy, who will play in the Middle Atlantic Women's championship at Washington in October, dropped an eight-iron shot on the seventeenth in the cup for an eagle deuce, and had 83 for the round.

Wiffy drove the first green, 305 yards, and the fifth, 300 yards uphill, three-putting the latter. Out in 35, even par, he started with two birdies on the second nine and then made three in a row, 15 through 17. He had par for a 65 on the eighteenth but hooked his tee shot in the trees and took five.

Bill Tarbett Wins Diving At Airport

Shoreham Star Beats Field of 12; Reed, Teammate, Injured

By Bob Knight.

Tow-headed Bill Tarbett put on the greatest diving exhibition of his eight-year career in these parts last night at the Airport Pool when he flipped through a flawless repertoire of eight dives to outclass a field of a dozen divers who converged on Washington from four Eastern States.

It was a tough battle all the way for the muscular Shoreham athlete, but he won with his final optional dive by warranting a judges' decision of seven points on the suicidal one-and-one-half somersault forward with a full twist.

Tarbett, who usually rises to the occasion when confronted with stiff competition, was pushed to greater heights by Bob Logan, young Pennsylvania A. C. star. Johnny Marshall, Washington's diving cop, fell out of the running halfway through the contest when he struck the board on a difficult half gainer with a pike. He managed to finish, however, despite a badly wrenched shoulder.

The 60-yard free style for men went to Brent Farber, of the Baltimore Knights of Columbus, by a mere fraction of a dorsal fin. Barber, a 22-year-old natator who swims nine months of the year for Washington and Lee University, slapped his hand on the concrete at the finish, a judge's eyelash before John Miller, South Atlantic interscholastic 50-yard champ, who represents Kenwood Country Club.

Mary Helen Taylor, attractive Pennsylvania Athletic Club mermaid, nipped two trophies in the women's events by stroking to victory in the backstroke and breaststroke. She put in a full evening's work to win the latter event after A. A. U. judges declared a false start in the final heat. Six contestants who had waded through four heats to get to the final found themselves faced with an extra race when they were forced to shuttle the pool to make up for the premature start.

MEN

60-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Brent Farber (Baltimore K. of C.); second, John Miller (Kenwood Club); third, Mason Boor (Reading Y. M. C. A.). Time, 31.4 seconds.

60-YARD BACKSTROKE—Won by Roy Gibson (Washington Y. M. C. A.); second, William Melville (Baltimore K. of C.); third, Daniel Weiner (unattached, Baltimore). Time, 34.8 seconds.

60-YARD BREASTSTROKE—Won by Sol Holland (Baltimore Y. M. H. A.); second, Arthur Hecht (Baltimore K. of C.); third, Bob Rosenstein (Baltimore Y. M. C. A.). Time, 38.3 seconds.

MEN'S DIVING—Won by William Tarbett (Shoreham Club), 95.41 points; second, Robert K. Logan (Penn A. C.), 91.47 points; third, William J. Cant, Jr. (Penn A. C.), 86.37 points.

Hoyas' Track Outlook Rosy With 'Hap' Hardell at Helm

Former Tech Mentor Also Signed to Coach Freshman Grid Team

By Jack Munhall.

Georgetown University continued its drive to return to the rosy glow of big-time athletics yesterday when it appointed Elmer P. (Hap) Hardell coach of varsity track and freshman football and in so doing plucked from the local high school ranks the most gifted handler of boys ever to accomplish mystic results in the District.

It was little more than a year ago that the little thin man with the piercing eyes and the Ned Sparks "dead pan" surprisingly asked to be relieved of his athletic duties at McKinley Tech High in order to pursue additional college work.

Tech's loss was not so much the retirement of a coach who had produced football teams unparalleled here for precision and mechanical perfection and a coach whose track teams were the best of the lot over a period of ten years, but the most important blow to its athletics was the loss of a man who had the ability to inspire his teams in a manner typical of the late and immortal Knute Rockne.

ELMER HARDELL

Not Translatable

That power was not translatable into adequate words. One could catch only whispy glimpses of its material phases, such as the competitive fury of his players on the field and their disciple-like attitude off the field; the fact that he once turned down a much better offer from V. P. I. to keep a $2,800 job at the school of his choice, and the way his old charges came back to Tech to talk over old times and new prospects.

Perhaps Hardell's genius of leadership was developed at Michigan, where he earned his "M" and learned every trick of Steve Farrell, the old master of track; perhaps it was picked up in France, where he was stationed in Gen. Pershing's headquarters at Chaumont after leaving Michigan to enlist in the Army.

But we believe the earliest traces of it were seen in his undergraduate days at Tech when he took his first coaching position upon himself. He was a sophomore when one day in the spring of 1911 he at last obeyed an impulse that had been gnawing at him for years. He saw a kid named Lockwood Johnson, a freshman, running in a fashion that he knew could be improved. Rather timidly he told Johnson what was wrong with his stride. Johnson did as he was told, said "Thanks" and didn't know for years that he had been a witness to the start of a great coaching career.

Between winning himself four "T's" in track, Hap continued his promiscuous coaching through 1912, 1913 and 1914, when he graduated from Tech, having broken the high school half-mile record twice.

Years later Hardell returned to Tech and in 1923 was appointed athletic director, and then in 1924 he came into his own as a football coach. That year saw the first glimmering of Tech's famed coterie of spinner plays, born of Hardell's exhaustive investigation of football systems and attendance at the coaching schools of Zupke, Dobie, Rockne, Warner, Yost and Little.

That year, too, marked the start of Tech's track reign which saw the Maroon and Gray undisputed champions for five straight years. Just as he had learned football, Hardell sought the inside of track. He sought the counsel of Billy Foley Bromley Gish, Jim Mulligan and Steve Farrell.

It was small wonder, then, that when Hardell retired, it became a legend that he could take any reasonably strong group of boys and make them high school champions. Nor was it surprising that it was said Tech without Hardell would have the personality of a robot.

Sports history is dotted with stories of a pupil succeeding his teacher. Hardell's going to Georgetown is another example. For he will be succeeding Jim Mulligan to whom he often went for advice on his problems at Tech.

Mulligan resigned early this spring to devote his full time to business.

Dell Takes Split Decision Over Wills

1 Judge Gives Frankie The Fight; Spangler, Nedomatsky Draw

By Al Hailey

Exhibiting a neat running and cuddling attack, Frankie Wills, 147¾, of Washington, dropped an eight-round decision to Carl Dell, 144½, of New York, last night at Griffith Stadium in the headline eight-round bout of Promoter Joe Turner's "no-name" boxing show.

The decision for Dell over the retreating Washingtonian was 2 to 1. Dell, bleeding from a cut over his left eye in the fifth, shaved down Wills' early lead in the late rounds when the local boy tired badly.

The New York fighter rushed out of his corner in the sixth round and opened up with a deluge of rights and lefts that had Wills hanging on briefly.

Wills' punch, retreat and hang-on tactics bewildered the charging Dell in the early rounds, but he finally found the answer and worked on Frankie's mid-section in the infighting. Wills opened up in the fourth round and gave Dell a hard time with a series of lefts and right crosses that had the crowd screaming for a knockout.

For the most part, however, the 1,500 fans sang "Hold Tight," and the Washington fighter followed the theme rather well. The wrestling became so vigorous in the sixth that both boys fell to the canvas wrapped in each other's arms.

Card Redeemed

Redeeming the 38-round program was the six-round melee in which Ivan Nedomatsky, 147, former Maryland University fighter, started a comeback trail by fighting to a draw with Joey Spangler, 147¾, of Richmond.

After flooring Spangler in the first and second rounds, Ivan tired and dropped the next three rounds, on The Post score sheet, but rallied with a two-fisted attack in the sixth that had the crowd in such an uproar that both boys fought several seconds after the bell.

It was a toe-to-toe slugging spree throughout, with Spangler sprawling forward for no count in the first few seconds when Ivan landed a whistling left hook to his right eye. Ivan sent Joey to the canvas for the count of nine in the second with a two-handed attack to the head. Spangler almost finished Ivan in the fifth, but he rallied and came back to take the sixth.

William Kayoed

Al Lowman, 178, of Baltimore, upset the dope by knocking out the hard-punching Jim Williams, 176, former Virginia Sate amateur heavyweight champion, in 2:48 of the fourth round of their scheduled eight-round clash.

Lowman absorbed an abundance of punishment from Williams in the first round, but finally diagnosed the latter's attack and finished him with a barrage of rights and lefts to the midsection.

After a flurry of flying fists and feet, Al Hart, 220-pound Washington Barracks fighter, knocked out Cyclone Perry, 193, of Newport News, in 51 seconds of the first round of their proposed four-round bout.

Vic Finazzo, 148½, of Baltimore, and Bob Wilson, 149, of Washington, battled to a six-round draw in a match that was scheduled to pick a welterweight opponent for Boston's Dem Wakerlis next week.

West Virginia Net Play Delayed

Special Dispatch to The Post

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., July 17.—Failure of many of the entries to arrive on time today forced a 24-hour postponement of the West Virginia amateur tennis championships. The players already here spent the day in practice after Tournament Chairman George D. O'Brien decided to hold the first round tomorrow.

Defending Champion Barney Welsh, of Rockville, Mr., has been seeded No. 1, just ahead of 18-year-old Deacon Parsons, of Huntington, State closed titleholder.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 17.—The Giants can squawk their heads off for the remainder of the season—about Linus (Small) Frey's foul home run in last Friday's crucial game at the Polo Grounds, but all they'll get is tonsil exercise. There is no provision in the baseball rules whereby a team can formally protest an umpire's judgment. Ballplayers squawk out of habit or occasional righteousness and always with the faint hope that one of the other umpires on the field will reverse the erring confrere.

CONSIDINE

The only legitimate beef a ball club has against an umpire is when it catches him red-handed in an improper interpretation of the written rules. No matter if Frey's home run was 40 miles foul, it was fair if Umpire Lex Ballanfant said so and the others agreed with him, as they did when the players and Bill Terry appealed to them. No court can reverse him.

Umpires rarely overrule one another on matters of judgment as to whether a ball was fair or foul, ball or strike, or whether a man was safe or out or ran out of the baseline or a dozen other emergencies that call for split-second decisions. They work closely together. Umpires have a system of signals all their own and harder to detect than the signals of the coaches. An umpire in a tough spot on a foul ball decision frequently will give one quick appealing glance at his friends—assuming that an umpire has friends—and get from them a subtle tip-off as to how to rule.

Similar Situation at Washington

Umpires are by nature self-reliant, for their lot is little better than that of a well-fed pariah. They can't travel on the same trains with ballplayers and are asked to live at different hotels. Before a game they must sit in the stands and serve as stool pigeons for the league offices—to peach on any player found fraternizing with a member of another team. Their reward for a perfectly umpired game is dead silence from the crowd. The same crowd that finds itself able to extend tolerance to a ballplayer's mistakes can't endure the mistakes of an umpire. The common bond of oppression makes umpires reluctantly related to one another, in spirit at least, which is probably why Ziggy Sears and George Magerkurth came loyally to the side of the beleaguered Ballanfant at the Polo Grounds, when they—and everybody else in the park—saw Frey's fly fall into foul territory.

Bill McKechnie, who stood belligerently by the "Yeah, you're another" fight the Giants were waging with the umpires to see that justice wasn't done, will recall a somewhat similar circumstance 14 years ago in Washington. Bill's Pirates had edged into the World Series and were doing very nicely when one of them—it might have been Kiki Cuyler—hit a long fly into the temporary stands at Griffith Stadium. Sam Rice, the old Washington outfielder, galloped up to the low fence in front of the stands, leaned back as the ball came down, rummaged around for four or five seconds and then came up with the pill in his bare hand—yelling triumphantly. Bill Klem and the other umpires ruled that he had caught it, and McKechnie hollered murder.

Even Reds Might Have Confessed

"Look here, Bill," he yelled at Klem, "I'll go up into that stand right now and get 5,000 people to swear that Rice didn't catch that ball."

Klem thought that over a moment, then let loose a stentorian reply, "All right, young man, but don't forget this: Bucky Harris could go up there and get 40,000 people to swear Rice did catch it."

Which well expressed the reason why the baseball fathers have never seen fit to ask the fans, as a whole, their opinion as to whether a ball was foul or fair, good or bad, when the umpires become confused. The answer Friday at the Polo Grounds would have been overwhelmingly against the umpires. If ballplayers told the truth, when it hurt, even some of the Reds would have voted that the ball was foul—judging from the way they laughed when it was ruled fair. It must have been criminally foul to arouse the Giants from their traditional torpor.

It's a hard rule, the one that makes an umpire's judgment infallible, but it's the only thing that will work. Otherwise the biggest department in organized baseball would be the protest bureau. As it is now the protests are rare, because the umpires know the rules instinctively by the time they get as high as Class B baseball. And few will exercise their right to overrule a confrere, if appealed to, knowing that if they do so they lose that confrere as a friend. Friends are scarce, and never again could they be sure of the other umpire's support in a similar pinch.

A sweepstakes for the professionals, at $3 per entry, and Class A and B handicap tourney for the simon-pures are also on the lay's card. Contenstants must have a State handicap card. Merchandise prizes will be awarded.

At least six local professionals are planning to compete in the Bedford Springs, Pa., pro-amateur tournament on Sunday and the 36-hole Bedford Open Monday over the resort course. Napper Tandy Wins Suffolk Feature by Length and Half

White Sand, Boston Pal Run 2d, 3d

Compton-Bedwell Entry 9-5 Favorites At Post; Fourth Start Of Year for Racer

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 17.—Surprising by his finish, Phil Schwartz's Napper Tandy, making his fourth start of the year, triumphed by a length and a half today in the $1,200 allowance feature, mile and a sixteenth, at Suffolk Downs.

A similar distance separated White Sand and Boston Pal, the A. C. Compton-H. Guy Bedwell entry, respectively, which went away 9-5 favorite in the field of seven starters.

The winner ran the distance in 1:44 2-5 and paid $17.20, $6 and $5.40. The entry paid $3.20 and $3.60. Mrs. Emil Denemark's Dorothy Rock ran fourth, still another length and a half ahead of Mrs. M. Simmons' Dark Beau, which ran evenly all the way.

Dorothy Rock set the pace into the clubhouse turn with Napper Tandy a neck away and Mrs. Elmer Trueman's Toddle On third. When Dorothy Rock started to fade going to the half mile pole, Napper Tandy took the lead and never was headed.

The entry moved to him nearing the quarter pole as did Toddle On, but White Sand, which finished best of the challengers, could not catch the gelded son of Kodoo. Toddle On tired badly in the rush for the wire. W. E. Boeing's Piccolo trailed.

Bucking Wins Feature At Arlington Park

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Joseph E. Widener's Bucking reveled in the sloppy going in the feature event at six furlongs, winning by a neck at Arlington Park today.

Morris Vehon's Smart Trick got third money.

Bucking, ridden by Jockey Warren Yarberry, ran the distance in 1:12 1/5, paying $8.20 to win, $4.60 to place and $3.00 to show.

SHAILLEEN closed stoutly in the last three-sixteenths mile.

MARTIN BOY, restrained early, moved up gamely when called upon and finished strongly after suffering interference. BIG BULLY, tried early in closest chase of the early pacemakers, was moving up gamely when SUN ARBOR shut him off nearing the stretch, recovered gamely only to be caught in close quarters midway of the stretch run.

SELMA JACK improved her position gradually and, coming to the outside in the stretch, closed with good energy. BROOMORIA, hustled to the front, was rated along under slight restraint and, while responding gamely when placed under pressure, was unable to engage the leaders.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NAPPER TANDY, $17.20, $6.00, $5.40; WHITE SAND (entry), $3.20, $3.60; BOSTON PAL (entry), $3.60.

NAPPER TANDY, prominent all the way, disposed of DOROTHY ROCK for the command soon after straightening out on the backstretch, drew clear and, rated along in front, was under a hand ride through the stretch to hold WHITE SAND safe. The latter, slow to begin, began working her way forwardly on the outside in the last 3 furlongs, moved up threateningly when reaching the stretch, but was unable to close any ground on the leader during the final drive. BOSTON PAL outbroke his field but was taken in and steadied along early, moved up willingly on the outside, but was unable to seriously threaten during the last five-sixteenths mile.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HALLIES PLAY (entry), $72.00, $20.00, $9.80; PADDY'S SISTER, $4.40, $3.40; VEIL STAR, $3.80.

HALLIE'S PLAY displayed speed from the start, followed along in nearest chase of the pace, disposed of VEIL STAR for the lead and, meeting stubborn opposition from PADDY'S SISTER all the last five-sixteenths, outlasted the latter at the end. PADDY'S SISTER bettered her position gradually and fought it out stubbornly. VEIL STAR was forwardly placed throughout and held on determinedly to the end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY ROMA (entry), $9.80, $4.40, $5.20; OLD MAID, $7.00, $6.00; MISS PONNE (entry), 5.20.

LADY ROMA followed along within striking distance of the pace until the last 3 furlongs, moved up stoutly when called upon, disposed of CANOE for the lead and holding on stubbornly just lasted to hold OLD MAID. The latter, restrained early, was bothered in the stretch and, closing with a rush, would probably have brought to the outside in the stretch and, closing with a rush, would probably have been the winner in another stride. MISS PONNE, hard hustled from the beginning, met determined opposition from CANOE and fought it out with good energy to the close.

Lone Ace Wins Pace Feature

Old Orchard Beach, Me., July 17 (AP).—Lone Ace, making its first start of the year, ran away with the free-for-all handicap pace, feature event of today's grand circuit racing program, in two straight heats.

Driven by Jay Douglas, Lone Ace outclassed a field of six starters, including the previously undefeated world pacing gelding, Little Pat, which finished way in the ruck. The times were 2:03 and 2:03¼.

N. Y. Yawl First In Yacht Race

Mackinaw City, Mich., July 17 (AP).—Windigo, a New York-owned yawl, crossed the finish line of the Port Huron-Mackinac Yacht race this afternoon one minute, 28 seconds ahead of the yawl Manitou, skippered by James Rowland Lowe, of Grand Rapids, Mich.

Windigo, first of the 33 sailing craft in the race to complete the course, had a sailing time of 46 hours, 31 minutes.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Hagerstown, Md., July 17.

Dear Al:

Racing will be resumed at this point tomorrow and will run through until Saturday ends the session. Then will follow a lull on the Maryland turf front until Belair opens on the following Wednesday. Then it will be on to Cumberland, Marlboro, Timonium and then the bigtime at Havre de Grace. Kentucky has its Derby, Maryland has its Preakness, New York has its Belmont and Illinois has its Classic Stakes. The last-named is the big summer test for 3-year-olds which comes up for contest on Saturday. Coming as it does after the other big 3-year-old tests have been decided, Arlington Park hopes to make this race outdo the others. The original idea of this race was to determine the 3-year-old champion. However, Johnstown already has clinched the laurels, come what may in Saturday's race. True, Johnstown took a licking in the mud at Pimlico from Challedon but with the Derby, Wood Memorial, Belmont Stakes, Withers and Dwyer Stakes tucked away, the Belair Bullet is the champ. The fact that Johnstown will march postward a heavy favorite on Saturday has not deducted from the race as a drawing card. Race fans around Chicago have been itching for a chance to see "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons' star in action and, providing there is a fast track, they probably will see him win. Challedon will be there with Trainer Lou Schaffer wishing for a muddy track, although the Challenger II colt didn't appear any too impressive in the "slop" at Suffolk Downs. If Johnstown is to have stern opposition Saturday, it probably will come from Sun Lover, winner of the Kent Handicap at Delaware Park, Technician, winner of the Flamingo Stakes at Hialeah and the Greentree Stable's Hash, the last-named showed a smashing race at New York last Saturday and may be the one to provide an upset, if such is to come. John Hay Whitney will send his Heather Broom into action. Trainer Earl Sande has freshened up Heather Broom and the former riding star claims he has improved. In all, Arlington Park expects a field of 12 to compete for the upward of $50,000 and the Classic Cup, a solid gold replica of the historic Coronation Cup won in England in 1929 by Mrs. John Hertz's Reigh Count.

BILL.

First Race—Breaking Waves is down on the reserve list but would be a keen contender if not the winner should he break into action. Couldn't take the turns last out but has had some practice since. Wagold has shown speed on occasions and should be prominent. Mamies Lad to take care of the others.

Second Race—Stand By has been rested since Charles Town and the veteran probably is ready for a hard race. Appears to be the class of the field. Miss Green is in with a feather and should be in the first flight in this company. Beryl King breaks off the rail and has speed. Could surprise.

Third Race—Timetta turned in a good effort to be second in that last and should do a lot of running for Sammy Palumbo in this test. Barraca toyed with a group of fair ones last out and is dangerous. Brown Chain flashed form in one race at Charles Town.

Fourth Race—Roman Boy gets in this with only 110 pounds and goes a route that seems to suit. Needs only the right ride to hang up a set of brackets. Charming Boy was off poorly in that last and closed much ground. With a better start, this fellow will be a threat. Lady Luck shifts to a better rider and should be in the pay circle.

Fifth Race—Iisamaid is a consistent plater and can win at a mile and a sixteenth although she prefers a longer route. Woodie Kirk will do the riding and I'm going to string along. Schley Goree had trouble getting away last out and may have better racing luck in this. Dark May has beaten better.

Sixth Race—Jimmy D. gets in with 108 pounds and meets opposition that seems to fit his purposes. I see no reason for mistakes. Big Mum, an "also eligible," cracked down and missed last out. May be underrated. Canimar is fit and could score, although a longer route is what this one likes.

Seventh Race—Counter Pass is harder to guess than Clocker Mike. I'm going to try to make this a spot for one of those stretch rushes that will take all the marbles. Justa Pilgrim appears well placed and will take it if it is the wrong day for the top one. Call Me Anne might steal a long lead and forget to stop.

Eighth Race—(Substitute). If this reserve affair is used, I'll take Stella Hampton, Colony and Rocky Mount.

Best bet—Jimmy D.

'Big John' Arrives For $50,000 Race At Arlington Park

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 17.—Johnstown, foremost candidate for the 1939 three-year-old championship, arrived at Arlington Park today at 11 a. m., from Aqueduct to fill his engagement in the $50,000 classic to be run Saturday.

Johnstown shipped well and was tucked away in barn No. 1 in "millionaire's row."

Challedon, which landed here Saturday occupies a stall near that of Johnstown of the Belair stud, owned by William Woodward, of New York.

Ben Jones to Train Calumet Stables

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Warren Wright, of Chicago, announced today Ben A. Jones, famous trainer, had been signed to take complete charge of his Calumet Farm stables.

Jones resigned last week as trainer of Herbert Woolf's Woolford Farms racing string. He is expected to assume charge of the Wright horses at Saratoga, N. Y., race meeting.

Thornwood At Empire Won By Flat Lance

Jockey Peters Rides Mount to 4-Length Victory in Feature

By the Associated Press

Empire City, N. Y., July 17.—T. H. Somerville's Flat Lance, freshened up since finishing far back in the Sussex Handicap at Delaware July 4, dropped down into more suitable competition here today and easily accountd for major honors in the Thornwood Handicap, a class "D" test of a mile and a furlong. The son of Lancegay gave favorite players their fifth success in as many races, being backed down to 7 to 5 by the hilltop crowd.

Maurice (Moose) Peters brought the colt back four lengths clear of Mrs. Blanche Hunter's Watersplash. The latter held a length and a half margin over Herman Philips' Scrooge. Unheralded was fourth and last. The time was 1:51 4-5.

Scrooge was the opening choice at 6 to 5, but he drifted to as high as 2 to 1 and finally closed at 9 to 5. Don Meade took the topweighted horse to the front soon after the break. Peters followed close behind on Flat Lance. As they began the swing out of the backstretch, Flat Lance forged into a narrow lead. Watersplash and Upheralded also moved into the fight.

Arizona Bookies Beat Law, Take Bets From Autos

Phoenix, Ariz., July 17 (AP).—Horse race bookmakers, routed from their elaborate establishments under a State supreme court ruling they were public nuisances, took bets today from parked automobiles.

City police were powerless to halt the bookies' new system, City Manager Roy Hishop said, because "decisions of the supreme court say bookmaking is not illegal. We cannot see where action can be taken unless the betting is done in a building, which would constitute a public nuisance."

Catcher Lombardi Hurts Finger as Reds Beat Bees, 4-0

Walters Wins 15th Victory This Season

Veteran Backstop Injured in Fifth When He Goes After Cuccinello's Pop Fly

By the Associated Press

Boston, July 17.—Behind the masterful, four-hit pitching of Bucky Walters, the league-leading Cincinnati Reds beat Boston's Bees, 4 to 0, today.

For a time it was feared the Reds would lose the services of Ernie Lombardi, their slugging catcher, but what was at first described as a split finger, later proved to be only a split nail.

In winning his fifteenth game of the season, Walters allowed but two Bees to reach second and none of them saw third. He passed none until the ninth, when the first hitter, Outlaw, batting for MacFayden, drew a walk.

Fifth Complete Contest

The game was the former infielder's fifth contest of the season and made him the leading hurler of both leagues in that respect.

The Reds' first run in the opening inning would have been enough to win the ball game.

Gamble singled, went to third on Frey's single and scored on McCormick's fly to Garms after Werber had lined out to Max West.

Warstler Makes Error

With one out, Frey singled, Werber flied to Cooney and Frey went to third when Warstler booted McCormick's grounder. Hershberger walked, filling the bases, and Craft doubled to the leftfield fence, clearing the bases.

The Bees never were a threat.

Lombardi was injured in the fifth when he went after Cuccinello's pop fly in the center of the diamond. As much disgusted as hurt, the big catcher kicked the ball from him and walked to the dugout. Hershberger replaced him.

Two Ex-Phils Help Pirates Win, 7 to 4

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, July 17.—Two former Phillies—Chuck Klein and Joe Bowman—led the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-to-4 victory over their former teammates today.

Klein, hitting safely in his sixteenth consecutive game, smashed two home runs—his fourth and fifth of the year—over the rightfield wall, driving in three runs to account for the margin of victory. The first came with one on in the fourth to send Ray Harrell to the showers. His second came in the ninth off relief twirler Ike Peason.

Tigers Snap Red Sox' Winning Streak, 13-6

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 17.—The Detroit Tigers pounded three Boston pitchers for 15 hits today to down the Red Sox, 13 to 6, and snap their string of 12 consecutive victories.

Buck Newsom went all the way on the mound for Detroit. Although he was touched for 10 hits and walked six men he had little difficulty winning his tenth victory.

Woody Rich, Boston's starting pitcher, was pounded out in the third inning, when Detroit staged a six-run rally. Joe Heving and Bill Sayles followed but were unable to stem the tide.

Earl Averill hit two home runs and George Tebbetts a homer, a double and a single for Detroit. The latter drove in five runs. Ted Williams hit a homer for the Sox.

Boston lost a full game to the league-leading New York Yankees, victorious at Cleveland.

Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox was knocked unconscious when he collided with Frank Higgins of the Tigers in a play at second base, but resumed playing after being revived. In the seventh inning he retired.

Cronin said tonight both his lips were cut but that he expected to play tomorrow in Chicago.

Cubs Regain 3d Place, Beat Dodgers, 11-2

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, July 17.—The Chicago Cubs moved back into third place today by landing on three Dodger pitchers for 14 hits and an 11-2 victory. Manager Gabby Hartnett, with a pair of doubles, two runs scored and two driven in, and Carl Reynolds, with a triple and two singles, led the attack.

Meanwhile Veteran Charley Root pitched 5-hit shutout ball until two were out in the sixth. Then singles by Dolf Camilli and Al Todd and a double by Gene Moore, combined with an outfield error, gave Brooklyn both of its runs. Root didn't give up a hit through the last three frames.

The Cubs got to Whit Wyatt for enough runs to win in the first two innings, but followed up with three more in the sixth off Vito Tamulis, with a Hartnett double the big blow, got another batch of four off Tamulis and Tot Pressnell in the eighth, when Reynolds opened with his three-bagger and Hartnett rapped out his second double, and one more off Pressnell in the ninth.

Ray Schalk Resigns Post As Indianapolis Manager

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, July 17.—Resignation of Ray Schalk, former Chicago White Sox catcher, as manager of the Indianapolis American Association baseball club was announced today by Leo T. Miller, club president.

Chalk, whose resignation is effective immediately, said he felt he should step out because he could not agree with Miller on certain policies. He said there had been no ill feeling between himself and Miller or the players.

Miller announced Coach Wes Griffin would be in charge of the team until a new manager is named.

Schalk and Miller came to the Indianapolis club last year from Buffalo, where they had been associated as field manager and business manager, respectfully, of the Buffalo International League club for six years.

On Fishing

An angler's log of a fishing trip might read something like the following (if he left here Friday afternoon, as we did) cross the Chesapeake on the Annapolis Ferry and arrive at Ocean City just in time not to see the marlin fleet come in, for the wind had been too stiff for fishing.

ACKERMAN

In addition, the general concensus of opinion was that the fish had moved on. That however, disturbed us not at all. We were fishing regardless, and with Capt. Lev Raymond on the Lev-Lou.

Leaving the dock at 5:15, we were soon feeling the surge of the bar, as well as the chop of the brisk southwest breeze, and picking the boats up ope by one in a parade formation on a southeast course.

A tuna feather was over almost from the first, and with no sign of fish nor feed as we passed the Jack Spot, so continued for another two and a half hours to the outside steamship lane some 20 miles offshore Winter Quarter Light Vessel.

Still no fish, nor any signs of them, and now Paul Townsend's 50-watter on the Jacpau III laying at Trimper's dock was coming through the cross-talk of the guide boats asking our position, and suggesting a course that in less than 30 minutes had a big marlin up to the port outrigger

A strike, a jump, and the inkfish bait went skittering off to one side into the waiting mouth of a 20-pound female dolphin. At the same time, the bull took the starboard bait, and it was 10 minutes before they were in the boat and out of the way for real fishing.

Almost immediately another marlin raised to the baits, hit, and was on dimunitive Louise Raymond's line. 12:15 was the time as she layed back on the rod to set the hook. And just on the beginning of the Solunar period too, but it was one hour and 10 minutes later before her fish was up to the boat for the third and last time. Each time up was good for five or six jumps which must have brought the total to 40 or more.

While this fish that weighed 86 pounds was on, black fins were showing everywhere. Capt. Ches Gray, on the Hilda, was coming out wide open, and was hung to one before he got up to the Lev-Lou. The only other guide boat with a phone, the Hilda II, was coming up, and now we were hung on to a big one that was jumping all over the surface. For 30 minutes we gave when we had to, sometimes until the reel was almost bare of line, and took it back when we could, before the hook pulled out and a grand battler was on his way again.

The sea now was almost slick as we made a northing with the coming of evening; porpoises, as far as you could see, were rolling. An occasional whale blowing, and once in awhile the rise and whorl of a tuna, and even the thin black marlin fins were seen along the edge of the great school, but none that could be raised to the baits.

At 3.45 we come up to Crawford Savage with a tuna on that he estimated by its battle to go a hundred, and it was 5:15 before it was boated and we were on our way in, to hit the inlet just as good dark was settling.

Home Loans In May Set Year's Peak

125,604 Mortgages In Month Total $349,454,000

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Home mortgages recorded in American cities and towns during May set a new high monthly record so far for 1939, numbering 125,604, and amounting to $349,454,000, officials of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board report. For the first five months of this year, 521,762 mortgages on homes were recorded, valued at $1,437,276,000. The report of the Board's Division of Research and Statistics covered all non-farm mortgage recordings in the United States of a value of $20,000 and less.

Savings, building and loan associations continued to maintain top positions as chief institutional lenders on home property throughout the country, accounting for approximately one-third of the mortgages recorded in May. Number and value of mortgages according to type of lender were as follows: savings and loan associations, 43,648, $109,652,000; insurance companies, 6,009, $29,922,000; banks and trust companies, 25,658, $85,417,000; mutual savings banks, 3,825, $12,195,000; individuals, 30,904, $59,453,000; others 15,560, $52,815,000; total, 125,604, $349,454,000.

Statisticians of the Board receive reports on mortgage recordings from all parts of the Nation, submitted by savings and loan executives, officials and members of the United States Building and Loan League, the Mortgage Bankers Association and the American Title Association. These various local figures are tabulated and surveyed here and the monthly report then prepared constitutes the only national study of recorded home mortgages by class of lender in the United States.

National Union Election

At the recent annual meeting of stockholders of the National Union Insurance Co. of Washington, the following directors were chosen for the ensuing year: William L. Beale, Charles R. Brown, Floyd E. Davis, Alfred H. Lawson, William H. Marbury, Walter S. Pratt, jr., John Saul, James H. Atkinson and William H. Somervell.

At the organization meeting of the directors the following officers were re-elected: Alfred H. Lawson, president; John Saul, vice president; Floyd E. Davis, vice president; William H. Somervell, secretary, and William H. Marbury, assistant secretary.

Savings and Loan Promotion

More savings, building and loan associations have set aside special newspaper advertising and business promotional funds this year than ever before, the public relations department of the Federal Home Loan Bank Board reports in the Federal Home Loan Bank Review. One factor accounting for this development was the increased business obtained through such expenditures in 1938. This information was obtained from a survey of the promotional activities of more than 900 savings and loan associations. This number is equivalent to one in every four members of the Federal Home Loan Bank System.

An average of $2,189 for business development was spent by 838 reporting associations in 592 communities distributed throughout 46 States, the District of Columbia and Hawaii and including institutions with assets from $17,500 to $49,000,000. The total spent for business development by these 838 associations was $1,834,407.

The Review analysis of the relation of advertising and business promotion expenditures to amounts of new private share capital (savings) gained during 1938 reveals that 743 associations, for which complete figures were obtained, spent 1 1-5 cents

Retail Advertising Continues Gains

Chicago, July 17.—Although the volume of newspaper advertising placed by retailers in 79 major American cities during the week ended July 8 was up only fractionally over the corresponding week of 1938, total linage for the year to date continued to show a small increase over last year, Advertising Age reported today.

Corporations Pay $2 Taxes for Each $1 in Dividends

New York, July 17 (AP).—For every dollar paid in dividends to common stockholders in "typical" corporations, more than $2 was taken by tax collectors last year, the American Federation of Investors said today. In a survey of 163 companies, described as a "cross section of industry," the federation reported:

Total taxes paid by the 163 companies in 1938 was $1,643,000,000, equivalent to $283 per common stockholder and to $576 per employe. Taxes averaged $2.73 on each share of common stock, compared with $1.33 paid in dividends.

Employes in 1938 totaled 2,854,000, against more than 6,500,000 stockholders, with 5,806,000 common stockholders owning an average of 104 shares.

More than three-fourth of the common stockholders held less than 100 shares each. The average number of employes per company was 17,601 compared with 21,141 in 1937. Assets of the 163 companies totaled $40,379,000,000.

The federation said it had obtained the data direct from the corporations. Women, it found, amounted to 40 per cent of the 519,000 stockholders in the steel industry.

Corporate profits last year, analysts noted, were curtailed drastically after the 1937 business slump.

Steel Operations Advance to 56.4%, Highest This Year

New York, July 17 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 6.7 points to 56.4 per cent of capacity, highest rate thus far in the year, compared with 49.7 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations were at the rate of 55.0 per cent of capacity while a year ago they were 36.4 per cent.

The advance placed operating schedules above the pre-holiday level and the best since the second week of December last year. Highest rate in 1938 was hit in the week of September 14 when production went to 62.6 per cent of capacity.

Steel circles said a good part of the rise was based on a pick-up in demand for miscellaneous steel products. Many observers also said current indications pointed to increased specifications against contracts by the automobile industry.

Wheat Prices Rally to Erase Early Losses

Late Strength Comes From Mill Buying And Stock Advance

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 17.—Stubbornly resisting price declines of almost a cent a bushel at times, the grain market again today put on a show of underlying strength that kept selling in check and erased early losses.

Wheat and corn values suffered losses of as much as ⅞ cent at times, while rye was off about ¾ cent. Before the close, however, these declines were wiped away. Purchasing that gave the market its resistance was credited to milling interests, to dealers encouraged by the upturn in securities and to the effect of the Government price supporting program. Most of the selling was due to favorable weather and to weakness in Liverpool wheat futures, which tumbled 1 to 1⅛ cents to new all-time lows.

Closing Prices

Wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ lower compared with Saturday's finish, July 66@65⅞, September 66⅛@66⅜; corn unchanged to ¼ higher, July 44⅛, September 45⅜; oats unchanged to 1¼ higher; rye unchanged to ⅛ up, and lard unchanged to 5 cents higher.

Reports of good rains in the corn belt and cooler and unsettled weather in the spring wheat zone together with a forecast of continued unsettled conditions had a bearish effect in all pits. Hedging in connection with marketing of new wheat also was in evidence.

The 12 principal interior markets received less wheat than a week ago or a year ago but Chicago had 1,004 cars, largest of the season, although much of this was not for sale. Domestic visible supply showed the largest increase of the season, gaining 19,066,000 bushels the past week to 110,727,000 bushels compared with 63,092,000 a year ago. Current stocks are the largest for this time of season since 1933.

Cotton Depressed By Weather Map And Washington

New York, July 17 (AP).—Buyers went to work late today in the cotton futures market as they watched stock prices soar. Closing quotations were up 1 to 5 points from early lows but still unchanged to 7 lower compared with the previous finish.

More aggressive demand was blocked, brokers said, by the continued official silence from Washington on exactly what subsidy the Government will place on cotton exports.

Sellers, as in recent sessions, charted action by the weather map and favorable crop and weather conditions over the week-end were credited with most of the pressure. Some support came in the form of price fixing for mill account, which appeared on recessions, plus local support.

Business Failures

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Advance Is Strong, Definite on Broad Front; Bull Session Heaviest in Ten Years; Bond and Curb Markets Also Buoyant

New York, July 17.—Breaking out of the narrow trading range of the last few months, stock prices rose sharply today in the heaviest dealings since the bear session of March 31. Scores of individual issues moved up 1 to 9 points.

Accumulation of buying orders over the week-end resulted in a moderately higher opening. Quotations continued to edge upward in the morning, the rise being accelerated after the noon hour when announcement came that steel output had established a new 1939 high. In the final hour the advance gained momentum, volume rose and tickers dropped behind as shorts were driven to cover.

Features may be summarized as follows:

An advance of 1.68 points in the New York Herald Tribune's 100-stock average was the largest for any day since June 29, 1938, the index reaching the best level since March 21.

Turnover of 1,750,600 shares on the big board was the largest since the total of 2,888,390 shares exchanged March 31, when prices broke, and the largest for a bull session since December 29, 1928. Last hour sales of 830,600 shares was the largest since October 18, 1938, when transactions for the final hour were 890,000.

Volume on the New York Curb Exchange of 291,000 shares was the largest since the April 11 total of 269,305 shares.

Issues traded, numbering 814 for the stock exchange, revealed the broadest market since April 11 when 895 figured in transactions.

Domestic Optimism

Local markets advanced apparently because of domestic signals and not because of betterment in the foreign outlook. Financial dealings in London, Paris and Berlin gave no encouragement to the unlooked for outbreak of bullishness here. While steady, overseas markets appeared as cautious as ever. Early in the day brokers reported that some institutional funds and commitments for investment trust portfolios had contributed to demand. This buying, it was said, comes from the growing realization that domestic business and industry have made progress—a contraseasonal betterment—in the face of disturbed foreign conditions and a still hazy political picture in the United States.

This view as strengthened by the report of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, predicting further gains in commercial lines for the third quarter; by the unexpectedly large bulge in the steel rate of 6.7 points to 56.4 per cent, the highest since December 12, 1938; by the June rail revenue report showing a rise of 12 per cent compared with a year ago and by a variety of favorable items from automotive, metal, textile and other industries.

Shorts Rush to Cover

As in other recent markets, the appearance of demand in quality emphasized how tenaciously stocks are being held, accounting for the up-side thinness. During the long period of dullness, flating supply has dwindled and this gradually placed shorts in a precarious position. Forced to bid for stocks in that busy last hour, price gains between sales for many of the pivotals were frequently a point or more. One illustration of how difficult it was to buy stocks occurred in U. S. Rubber. About 15 minutes before the finish, dealings in this issue were temporarily held up because buyers and sellers were unable to get together. At the time, the shares were selling between 45 and 46.

On resumption of trading, 2,500 shares were sold at an advance of about a point. The close, at 46⅞ was 4¼ higher on 57,800 shares.

The general buoyancy also permitted extreme sensitiveness of individual stocks to favorable news. Du Pont provided one good example with a rise of better than 9 points net as the company reported six months' earnings equal to $3.28 a share against $1.36 a share for the like 1938 period. Westinghouse provided another with a gain of 6½ net on announcement of second quarter profit of $1.42 a share against 92 cents for the June period last year, together with news of a larger bonus for employes.

Loft was the day's leader on volume of 63,000 shares for 1½-point gain. Chrysler, on 63,100 shares, spurted 6½ points. Shorts were reported to have taken heavy punishment in this and other pivotals.

Steel Especially Strong

Steels turned in the best performance of any group, six leaders showing an average rise of better than 2½ points each. Steel common ended at 50, up 2¾; Bethlehem at 59½, up 3½, and Republic at 17¼, up 1½. Profit taking in the four hours in this and other divisions was readily absorbed. The Street heard that the unexpectedly large increase in the steel operating rate reflected earlier than anticipated commitments for rollings from motor car manufacturers. Motors did well all around, General Motors, fourth most active, was up 2⅜; Montgomery Ward was a feature in the merchandising sector with a 3½-point rise and Johns-Manville led building materials, adding 3½ points. Gains of 2 or more were turned in by Union Pacific, Union Carbide, Southern Railway, Kennecott, Goodyear, Chesapeake & Ohio, Atchison, Telephone, American Smelting and a number of others.

Rail Issues Lead Bond Rise

Speculative bonds moved upward today in the wake of the equities section. The market was dominated by the improved sentiment that sent stocks higher and best grade investment obligations were relatively dull. There was, however, no evidence of switching from best bonds into stocks, for United States Treasury issues advanced slightly, while high grade corporates held to previous levels. Foreign dollar bonds were quiet and irregular. Turnover amounted to $7,830,000, which is still subnormal for the bond market, but better than recent sessions.

Medium-priced railroad bonds attracted a good deal of attention, with gains of 1 to 4 points recorded in representative issues of roads like New York Central, Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific and Illinois Central. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles advanced sharply, along with related equities. Borderline and default carrier bonds did slightly better. Local tractions joined the upswing, as did communications, amusement and other special groups.

United States Treasury bonds showed small fractional gains. Activity was at a minimum, save for a few sizable blocks that were turned over on the big board for special reasons. Telephone bonds were quietly firm, as the new Southern Bell flotation was awaited. Leading power and light bonds hardly varied, and best rails were firm. The high grade industrials were neglected, owing to the imminence of the Shell Union offering.

High grade foreign dollar bonds were quietly accumulated, owing to passage of still another week end without European hostilities. Belgian issues were the favorites. Polish and Italian bonds were firm.

U. S. Harvests In 1939 Worth Over 2 Billions

Low Prices Bring Market Value Under 1938 and 1937

By the Associated Press

Chicago, July 17.—The 1939 United States grain crop has a market valuation in excess of two billion dollars, trade statisticians estimated today. This wealth, to be distributed among several million producers and those who direct the flow of grain to market, is based on prices which in some cases are the lowest or near the lowest in the past several years. It would be realized through the marketing or use of approximately 4,453,000,000 bushels which, favorable weather permitting, will be harvested before winter.

Corn, oats and wheat comprise the bulk of the crop, part of which has been harvested, with barley, rye and other minor grains adding to the total yield.

The 1939 harvest would be nearly 400,000,000 bushels smaller than that of 1938 and 500,000 bushels smaller than the 1937 crop, but with those exceptions would be equal to or larger than any other crop of the past seven years.

A market valuation above $2,000,000,000, based on current Chicago prices, was somewhat below the 1938 value of $2,334,000,000. The 1937 grain production was worth $3,000,000,000.

Corn Crop Large

The expected 2,500,000,000-bushel corn crop would be the biggest in seven years, except 1937, and worth $1,182,000,000, without figuring the possible rate at which loans will be made on corn. The 57 cents a bushel loan rate for 1938 corn is materially above current prices.

Most corn will be fed to livestock, instead of marketed as grain, but trade authorities said that would increase its value. The 1938 corn crop value was estimated at $1,271,000,000.

The wheat crop, now more than half harvested, was valued at nearly $500,000,000, compared with $660,000,000 a year ago and nearly $1,000,000,000 in 1937. The expected 1939 crop of 716,000,000 bushels was 214,000,000 smaller than last year.

An expected 872,000,000-bushel oats crop would be worth about $244,000,000, compared with $264,000,000 a year ago. The rye and barley crops were valued at $17,000,000 and $116,000,000, respectively, compared with $23,000,000 and $116,000,000 a year ago.

Denomination, $1,000; principal and semi-annual interest (J and J) payable in Baltimore or New York City at holder's option; general obligations; unlimited tax; coupon bonds registerable as to principal alone; exempt from taxation by the State of Maryland and by the counties and municipalities in said State; unconditionally guaranteed as to both principal and interest by Montgomery and Prince George's counties by endorsement on each bond; form of bonds substantially the same as bonds of the last preceding series. There will be no auction. Bonds will be delivered on or about August 18, 1939, at place of purchaser's choice. The Series RR Bonds will bear interest at the rate of 2¾% per annum and will be awarded to the highest bidder. The Series SS Bonds will be awarded at the highest price, not less than par and accrued interest, offered for the lowest interest rate bid upon in a multiple of 1/10 or 1/8 of 1% and no bid may name more than one rate for the bonds of this issue. A separate bid for each issue is required, but any proposal for both issues may provide that such proposal is for all bonds of both issues and not for one issue without the other. The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

After 15 years of a policy which frowned down promotions at the General Accounting Office except for a few which occurred through changes in grades, the C. A. O. is wondering if there's a new day on the horizon. Twenty-five hundred employes are hoping that Comptroller General Fred H. Brown's decision, A98068, dated May 25, 1939, will mean more bacon for wage earners inside the department. Brown's statement, which makes them optimistic, reads: "Any decision of my predecessor in office in conflict herewith will not be followed hereafter."

The deadlock which formerly existed under the regime of John R. McCarl was stated by McCarl as follows: "Good administration would warrant our appointing new people rather than making promotions even though the promotions have been justly earned."

The G. A. O. is asking, "For the first time, do insiders win out?"

The UFWA is rejoicing over the passage of S 261, amending the retirement act for Federal employes . . . but they're beating the drums with a few reservations.

What about that 5 per cent compulsory savings that the House bill provides? Is it right, asks Jacob Baker, chief of the UFWA, to tax a man for good and honest service? Baker further says: "Retirement is an earned right. The Government clearly recognizes this in its provision of its basic retirement allowance. To recognize that on one hand and say, 'This is what you earned by serving 30 years,' and then on the other hand, to say, 'But you must save 5 per cent of your salary to earn it' is not quite sensible."

The group will try to make the situation more sensible by requesting the conferees to reduce the compulsory savings clause.

What'll you have? Softball, baseball, bicycling, bowling, public speaking, photography, hiking, camping, etc. The Public Works Recreation Association, now in due process of organization, is wanting to know. The leisure time of employes of the PWA and the Federal Works Agency is being reorganized by an enthusiastic group of which the chairman is Charles E. Pynchon.

The drive for membership is being carried on by R. L. Dunbar, Dolores McCarthy and Dave Brunson. Ingham Mack is vice chairman of the association, to be known hereafter as the P. W. R. A. Treasurer is Davis L. Waters and secretary is William J. Routhier.

Others on committees are Dorothy Richardson, James Brown, Mary Hobson, Sasimir Fracziewicz, Edwin Simpson, Howard S. Gay, Raymond A. Kappler, James A. Aspoas, Walter M. Day, C. F. Heney and Don Weber.

All you need is a dollar and the will to play.

All the folk who drive their cars up Pennsylvania way to visit Gettysburg will find the gateposts to the national cemetery reset for a two-lane highway. CCC boys recently dug up the posts and gave them a pair of wider iron gates from the entrance to Antietam battlefield site.

For the military park at Gettysburg, there also will be more drinking fountains for the dusty motorist. These and 18 miles of horse trails are additional CCC jobs. More parking areas are also scheduled. In fact, Lincoln wouldn't know it any more.

Donald Edward McHenry, park naturalist, knows enough about trees to talk for hours about them, and make every hour interesting. He'll be master of ceremonies for the campfire program at Pierce Mill on Friday evening.

"For instance," says McHenry, "there's the Juniper tree."

It seems the Indians were never stumped for uses to make of it. Some of the Navajos stuffed draughty chinks in their log and mud huts with Juniper bark. Other tribes used its resin to stop toothache. A little resin in a big cavity and you kept the dentist bill right in the family.

The bark was also efficacious for ceremonials. Braves made ropes out of it, set fire to the ropes and ran with them toward the rising sun. The rope, thrown over their shoulders, was sure to remind them of anything which they may have forgotten. The Hopis chewed their berries, and considered them a delicacy, although they tasted a good bit like slippery varnish.

Among McHenry's favorite trees are the willow oak and the tulip. The natural color pictures of tree flowers which he'll show at the campfire meeting were taken by himself during this year and last.

According to the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor, the eighth Pan-American Child Congress will be called in San Jose, Costa Rica, October 12-19.

Two international expositions will be held in connection with the congress . . . the International Exposition of Social Hygiene, Maternal and Child Welfare and Education, and an exposition on child care.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

A slight confusion with the Blackwood convention resulted in a contract for 13 tricks, missing an ace on today's hand. Declarer was set two when four trumps, including the jack, ten and nine, held by one adversary, also proved a handicap to the slam.

The deal was played by husband and wife in a home rubber bridge game. F. N., to whom the deal was submitted for arbitration, ducks his duty and passes it along to us.

The cards and the bidding are shown in the box. F. N. says in explanation:

Today's Hand

Neither Side Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

♠ J 10 9 5 ♡ A 6 4 3 ◇ 6 2 ♣ 8 5 4	WEST	EAST ♠ 7 ♡ J 10 9 8 7 5 ◇ Q 9 3 ♣ 6 3 2
	SOUTH Mr. ♠ K Q 2 ♡ K Q ◇ A 10 8 7 4 ♣ A 10 9

The bidding:

6 ♡	Pass	7 ♠	Dbl.

Opening lead—J ♡.

"Down two, heart ace and spade jack both in West. Considerable confusion, without acrimony, resulted. The no trump bids were Blackwood. South said North's four no trump was unjustified without another ace and trump honor. North said her five spades was a sign-off and what right did South have to start the Blackwood all over again.

"They're both right, aren't they? I'd appreciate your judgment very much."

Six undoubtedly should be bid at either spades or diamonds, and on the surface a spade contract looks a little safer. It is unforunate that the trump division is bad, but that happens frequently to even the best bid slams.

North erred slightly on the side of optimism in starting the Blackwood bid on her slim holdings; four clubs, a mild slam invitation, might have been better. But South was very wrong in embarking upon a grand slam without knowing the location of the missing ace. He might well presume his partner must have one ace for her slam invitation, but there is no law that says she must have two. Since he held but two aces himself the fourth might easily be with the adversaries, and was.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XLII

They lifted their hands and were gone. Penny and Jody jogged after them. They would all use the same trail for some miles, but the Forresters, unburdened, on their fast horses, were already far ahead. To the east, they came out on the trail toward home. The going was slow and troublesome. Old Caesar would not follow behind the bear hide. But when Penny had Jody ride ahead, the Forrester horse insisted on taking the lead. There was a constant struggle. At last, through Juniper Prairie, Penny touched his heels to the horse and took a long lead. With the bear hide out of sight and smelling, old Caesar was content to trot along reasonably. At first Jody was uneasy, alone in the new wilderness of water. Then, with his bear meat behind him, he felt bold again, and mature.

M. K. Rawlings

He had thought that he wanted to hunt forever. But when the tall trees of Baxter's Island drew in sight, and he passed the path to the sink-hole and came to the split-rail fences of his father's fields, he was glad to be coming home. The fields were desolate from the waste of waters. The yard was swept barren. But he was coming in with meat that he had killed for the family, and Flag was waiting.

FOR TWO WEEKS Penny concerned himself with the salvaging of crops. The sweet potatoes were not ready, by two months, for digging. But they were rotting and would be a total loss if they were not dug. Jody worked long hours at them. He must be careful to go deeply enough with the potato fork and not go too close to the middle of the beds. Then, by lifting carefully, he brought up a forkful of potatoes unharmed. When they were all dug, Ma Baxter spread them out to dry and cure as best they could on the back porch. They all had to be gone over and more than half discarded. Rotting ends were cut off and with the nubbins set aside for the hogs.

The sugar cane was flattened to the ground. There was nothing to do for the present but leave it, for it was immature. It was already putting out roots along the stalks, but it could be trimmed and salvaged later.

The cow-pea hay was ruined. It had been near maturity and the week's soaking left it on the ground, a moldy mass. The peas that the Baxters had shelled were the only salvage. Three weeks after the flood, after good days of sun, Penny took his scythe to Mullet Prairie, as he now called it, and cut marsh grass and left it to cure.

"Good fodder in bad times," he said.

The prairie waters had receded and left no trace of the fish except their stench. Even Jody, whom few odors offended, was sickened. The smell of death lay everywhere.

Penny said uneasily, "Somethin's wrong. That stink's due to be done with. Things is yet dyin'."

A month after flood, in October, he returned with Jody in the wagon beside him to Mullet Prairie to gather the cut and cured hay. Rip and Julia trotted along behind the wagon. Penny allowed Flag, too, to follow, for he had begun to make great commotion whenever he was shut up and left behind in the shed. He ran, sometimes ahead of old Caesar, sometimes, when the road was wide enough, beside him. Now and then he dropped back and frolicked with the dogs. He had learned to eat green stuff and he stopped occasionally to nibble a tender bud or sprout.

Jody said, "Look back at him, Pa, pullin' buds like he was growed."

Penny smiled and said, "I tell you, never were sich a fawn."

Suddenly old Julia gave tongue and tore to the right into the bushes. Rip followed and Penny halted the wagon.

"Go see what them fools is after, Jody."

Jody jumped down and went after them. A few yards beyond he was able to identify the trail.

He called back, "Nothin' but cat."

PENNY LIFTED his horn to blow the dogs in when he heard Julia bay. He dismounted and pushed into the thick growth. The dogs had the cat at bay, but there was no fight. He went to them. Jody stood, puzzled. The wild-cat lay on its side, untouched. Julia and Rip circled, nipping, but with no responding attack. The cat bared its teeth and lashed its tail but did not stir. It was gaunt and weak.

Penny said, "The creetur's dyin'. Leave it be."

He called off the dogs and returned to the wagon.

Jody asked, "What's it dyin' of, Pa?"

"Why, the creeturs dies the same as us. Them as ain't kilt by their enemies. He's likely old and couldn't ketch hisself nothin' to feed on."

"His teeth wasn't wore down, like a old creetur."

Penny looked at him.

"Boy, you gittin' real observin'. Now I like to see that."

There was still no explanation of the wild-cat's feebleness. They reached the prairie and loaded the wagon with hay. Penny estimated that three more trips would be necessary. The marsh hay was coarse and stringy, but when frost had come and the wire grass was dry and harsh, Caesar and Trixie and the heifer calf would be glad to have it. They drove toward home leisurely. Old Caesar quickened his gait and even Julia ran on ahead, eager, as all domestic animals, for home. Past the trail to the sink-hole, at the corner of the first fence-row, Julia lifted her nose and bayed.

Penny said, "Now there'd be nothin' there in broad daylight."

Julia was insistent and jumped the fence and stopped, her bay turned to a shrill barking. Rip, clumsy in bull-dog fashion, clambered over the fence that the hound had cleared lightly. He, too, barked fiercely.

Penny said, "Well, I know better than to question a good dog's sense."

He stopped the wagon and took up his gun and went with Jody over the fence to the dogs. A buck deer lay in the corner. It shook its head, making a menancing motion with its horns. Penny lifted his gun, then lowered it.

"Now that buck's sick, too."

He approached close and the deer did not move. Its tongue lolled. Julia and Rip were in a frenzy. They could not understand the refusal of live game either to run or to fight.

"No use to waste shot."

HE TOOK HIS knife from its scabbard and went to the deer and slit its throat. It died with the quiet of a thing to whom death is only one short step beyond a present misery. He drove off the dogs and examined it carefully. Its tongue was black and swollen. Its eyes were red and watery. It was as thin as the dying wild cat.

He said, "This is worse'n I figgured. A plague has hit the wild creeturs. Hit's the black tongue."

Jody had heard of human plagues. The wild animals had always seemed to him to be charmed, and beyond all human ills. A creature died in the chase, or when another creature, more powerful, pounced and destroyed. Death in the scrub was clean and violent, never a slow sickness and lingering. He stared down at the dead deer.

He said, "We'll not eat, will we?"

Penny shook his head.

"'Tain't fitten."

The dogs were sniffing farther down the fence now. Julia barked again. Penny looked after her. A pile of carcasses lay in a heap. Two old bucks and a yearling had died together. Jody had seldom seen his father's face so grave. Penny examined the plague-killed deer and turned away without speaking. Death seemed to have appeared wholesale out of the air.

"What done it, Pa? What kilt 'em?"

Again Penny shook his head.

"I've never knowed what give the black tongue. Mebbe hit's the flood water, full o' dead things, has got pizenous."

A fear shot through Jody like a hot knife.

"Pa—Flag. He'll not git it, will he?"

"Son, I've told you all I know."

They returned to the wagon and drove on and into the lot and unloaded the hay. Jody felt weak and sick. Flag bleated. He went to him and clutched him around the neck and held him tightly, until the fawn pulled away for breath.

Jody whispered, "Don't git it. Please don't git it."

At the house, Ma Baxter received the news stolidly. She had shed tears and wailed her laments when the crops were ruined. As the going of too many of her children had wrung her dry of feeling, now the passing of the game was only another unprotested incident.

She said only, "Best water the stock from the high trough and not let 'em git to the seepage pool."

JODY FELT a hope for Flag. He would feed him only what he ate himself, keep away from the tainted grass, water him from the Baxters' own drinking water. If Flag died, he thought with a mournful satisfaction, they would die together.

He asked, "Do folkses git the black tongue?"

"Only the creeturs."

He tied Flag stoutly in the shed when he made the next trip in the wagon for hay. Penny tied up the dogs as well. Jody asked countless questions. Would the hay be tainted? Would the plague last forever? Would there be any game left? To all, Penny, who knew, he had thought, almost everything, shook his head in ignorance.

"Keep still, boy, for the Lord's sake. A thing's happened has never happened before. How would ary man know the answers?"

His father left him alone to rake hay and load the wagon while he unhitched Caesar and rode on to the Forresters for information. Jody felt uneasy and miserable, alone at the edge of the marsh. The world seemed empty. Only over the scrub the buzzards wheeled, profiting. He hurried at his work and had finished it long before his father returned. He climbed to the top of the load of hay and lay flat on his back, staring at the sky. He decided that the world was a very peculiar place to live in. Things happened that had no reason and made no sense and did harm, like the bears and panthers, but without their excuse of hunger. He did not approve.

Against the uncomfortable and alarming things that happened, he balanced Flag. His father, too, of course. But Flag lived in a secret place in his heart that had been long aching and vacant. If Flag were not stricken with the plague, the flood, he decided, would be interesting. If he lived to be as old as Penny, as old as Grandma Huito and Ma Forrester, he would never forget, he knew, the fright and enchantment of the endless days and nights of storm.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

U. S. Turns To Farm Crops For Motor Fuel

Replacement for Petroleum Seen as Vital; Reserves Low

Motor fuel from wheat and corn may make the wheels of industry spin. A new series of experiments begun yesterday at the Agriculture Department's Northern Regional Research Laboratory at Peoria, Ill., is to determine whether alcohol derived from farm crops can be used in place of petroleum. Dr. David F. Smith, of the University of Buffalo, will head the experiments.

Although most of the work will be with wheat and corn, any produce which can furnish carbohydrate materials, will be considered. In that case even sweet potatoes are likely sources.

With petroleum reserves in this country constantly decreasing, a replacement fuel for purposes of definite conservation is one of the problems to be handled. Up until the present, the United States has been supplying between 60 to 65 per cent of the world's petroleum. At present, 15 to 20 years' supply of oil, at 1,200,000,000 barrels of crude petroleum per year, may be expected from fields now in operation. But it is doubtful, according to authorities, whether this country possesses 65 per cent of the world's reserves, counting possible sources which have not yet been tapped.

The present study is the outcome of other preliminary research carried on by the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering.

Smith, working in the physical chemistry section of the United States Bureu of Mines, also did pioneer work in the utilization of coal as fuel for internal combustion engines.

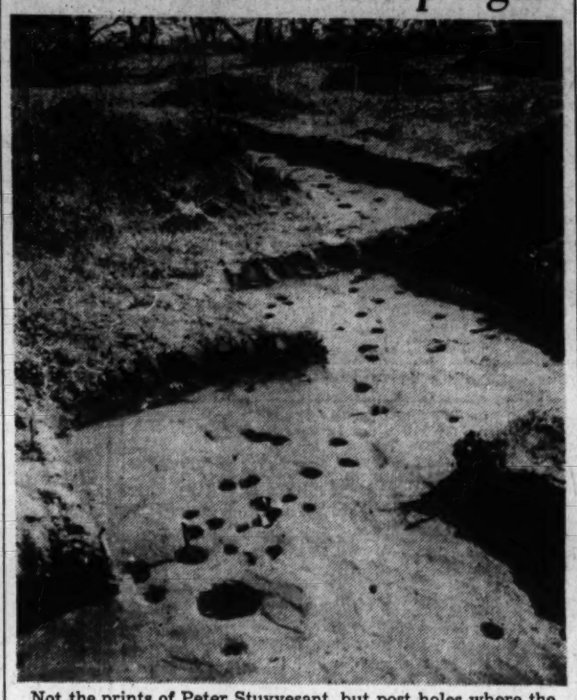
Archaeologists Soon to Let Powhatan's Shade Sleep Again



Not the prints of Peter Stuyvesant, but post holes where the stockade stood around Patawomeke, known in history as the place where Pocahontas was kidnaped. It is in these holes that Smithsonian Institute archeologists have found bones, arrowheads, pottery and pipes that date back to the seventeenth century

Excavations at Ancient Village From Which Potomac Took Its Name Reveal Implements of 17th Century Indian Life

For four years the shades of Chief Powhatan and his beautiful daughter Pocahontas have stirred uneasily over the site of the ancient village of Patawomeke, for the arm of Capt. John Smith has stretched across 300 years to trouble them. This week their restless vigil is to end, for Dr. T. Dale Stewart, their modern tormentor, promises to finish his work.

Capt. Smith meant no such harm to the romantic princess who saved his life and to her all-powerful father, but his 17th-century curiosity sent 20th-century archeologists with spades and trowels to dig up the buried secret of one of Powhatan's towns.

Within a week Dr. Stewart, of the Smithsonian Institution expects to finish his explorations into the Indian village, the last that Pocahontas saw before embracing the Christian religion and an English husband.

Patawomeke, a town of 1,000 people on Potomac Creek in Stafford County, Va., gave its name to the Potomac River, is known in history as the place where the Indian princess was kidnapped by Capt. Samuel Argall in 1609 and held for ransom against English prisoners of Chief Powhatan. But to Dr. Stewart it is an archaeological "site" of particular value because Capt. Smith visited it, mapped it and identified it as existing at a certain date.

In graves, ditches and holes where posts once were placed to form the stockade around the village or support huts, Dr. Stewart has found bones, arrow heads, bits of pottery and pipes that he definitely can date as early seventeenth century.

Wherever else similar articles are found, similarly made and decorated, Dr. Stewart said yesterday, such "sites" safely can be dated in the same period. By such means do archeologists breathe life into the dust and ashes they find and reconstruct the picture of vanished civilization, he explained.

Excavations at Patawomeke first were started four years ago by the late Judge William J. Graham, of the United States Court of Customs and Patent Appeals, who was led to the spot by Capt. Smith's map. After his death in 1936 Dr. Stewart carried on, but his work was interrupted last fall when the digging threatened to interfere with a standing barley crop.

This year the barley field has been left fallow and Dr. Stewart almost has reached the end of his excavations.

'Rowdy' for 'Fido' Marks New Descriptive Dog Name Trend

Steve Early Still Calls His Pet 'Pooch,' But 'Smarty Pants,' 'Sleepy' and 'Spunkie' Are the Fashion, Registrations Show

Registrations of dogdom's thoroughbreds and just plain mutts, 6,000 of them so far this month, are pointing new trends in canine names, the chief dog license clerk, Mrs. Hattie F. Small, said yesterday.

Presidential Secretary Steve Early's dog still is called "Pooch," and J. Edgar Hoover's answers to "Scotty," but they only evidence a passing tradition. The annual July registration at the District Building shows the tendency is toward more descriptive names.

Typical are "Rowdy," the name of a brown and white dog which runs Edward V. Walsh's household at 2456 Thirty-ninth street northwest; "Dumpy," that of a pet belonging to E. P. Aveille, 1825 Corcoran street northwest, and "Spunkie," name of a dog which lives with F. T. Fuhrman at 616 Gallatin street northwest. Others are "Smarty Pants," for the pet which shares 606 Farragut street northwest with Dora Flap, and "Sleepy," name of the dog which resides with Charles Kendrick, 3146 O street northwest. One with a questionable disposition is called "Hitler." As yet no "Mussolini" has been registered.

White House dogs get the lowest license numbers, when there are any, but none has been registered yet this month, remarked Mrs. Small, who has been getting official Washington its low dog tag numbers for 13 years. The whole registering process has been slow this year. With only two weeks before the August 1 deadline, less than one-fourth of the city's 26,000 dogs have their new $2 tags.

The most popular name at the clerk's office yesterday was "Barney," while the most unusual was "Fu," short for "Fu Manchu," owned by Mrs. B. C. Craig, 1400 Iris avenue northwest.

Apartment Owner Loses Tax Appeal

The District Board of Tax Appeals ruled yesterday that Bates Warren, attorney, is not entitled to a refund on the business privilege tax of $1,784.11 he paid in 1936.

Warren contended that although he was owner of apartment houses and an office building, he leased them to real estate companies and did not actually operate them and claimed therefore a refund on the tax for rental transactions.
